A Coed Speaks.

TO THE EDITOR:

Perhaps a capsule or two would be most effective if administered in strong doses an hour apart until three doses are taken. I refer to the suggestion of C. R. Y. One really should feel better after having relieved the gaseous pains which do cause sleepless nights and leave a bad taste in one's mouth.

First of all, I would like to reply argumentatively to the statement of the "economic trade of one good for another." What is a good? I challenge the use of that word in saying "dollars are exchanged for a 'good'." What is the "good" in the Military ball? What is the attraction? The dance and presentation of the honorary colonel was suggested. I ask you fairly, as one college student to another (assuming we have full control of our faculties and a fair amount of intelligence), what is the attraction in the presentation of some girl dressed up in a soldier suit? Of what use will that honor be except to walk under a line of sabres—those same sabres which may fall into one of the bloodiest and deadliest worldwide conflicts which has yet confronted the youth of the world. What good is that honor when the "chosen" is graduated? Is it to show the grandchildren the picture in the yearbook saying "This was when?"

The students on this campus are griping about there being no organization or union of students. They talk of a Student Union building and what is being done? They talk of better orchestras for bigger balls. Is that anything that a number of people can agree upon anyway?

What is the Military ball but an advertising scheme for the ROTC? And I'm not even referring to the profiteering of which the organization is accused! Do the fellows conceitedly think they look pretty in their brassy soldier suits? Or is it an outgrowth of the "Play Soldier" of childhood days?

I heartily second the motion of J. B.'s to boycott the Military ball. There is no need for intelligent students to support an organization in which there is so obviously room for criticism of its management.

It is not probably generally known on this campus, but if a fellow should be refused a date to this "gala occasion" it is likely to be a refusal from girls who have taken the stand:

1. War is unnecessary.
2. We will stand together in an effort to outlaw war.
3. The Military ball is giving social approval and grace to a system which in its essence is one of violence, destruction and desecration of human life.
4. We want a function that does not smack of cannons, blood, human sacrifice and ignorance, to open the formal season at the University of Nebraska.

Very sincerely, F. S.

Outsanctioning the sanctionists was the charge hurled at the United States by Italians after Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes had made an appeal that all exports of petroleum to the combatants in Ethiopia be barred. The League of Nations had been scheduled to add oil to the list of sanctions, but efforts of France and Great Britain caused the league to postpone the action.

That Oil Will Be added to the league sanctions when the staff meets Dec. 12 is considered probable in spite of Italian threats that such a move would be considered a military action. The staff will consider also embargoes on other materials of war. Oil producing countries have signified their intention of supporting the oil embargo. Soviet Russia, although it has sold oil to Italy, has declared that none will be sold to that country if an official embargo is authorized.

France Remained Doubtful for a time, but last week Premier Pierre Laval not only gave the support of France for the embargo, but he warned Italy against any unprovoked attack on the British Mediterranean fleet. Reports from well informed sources had indicated that Mussolini planned to attack the fleet if England pressed for the imposition of an oil embargo on Italy. Such international relations made it duce's imperialistic conquest of Ethiopia secondary in importance.

England Sought to determine where she would first have to meet an Italian air and naval attack, since that country is determined to force the embargo on Italy. Military authorities agreed that Alexandria, Egypt, would be the first logical target. The attack would then probably extend to Port Said in an attempt to control the Suez canal. Italy might find some help in Egypt. Alexandria was the scene of several anti-British demonstrations recently. Last week they had been extended to Cairo. Egyptian students paraded the streets shouting, "Off with our British yoke."

Italians Rebutted Against the sanctions in every way possible. Mussolini persuaded Hungary not to join the sanctionists and signed a trade treaty with that country. He blocked payments out of the accounts in Italy of London banks of many Britains residing there and declared a state monopoly on all gold. The dictator merged the country's cellulose and paper firms, Italy having to import nearly all its paper pulp. He urged Italians to use their cars only for business to save the country's gas supply. All these, however, were only gestures. Italy is basically poor in natural resources and cash. Since the country can never be self supporting, it is evident that sanctions will effectively cripple it.

OHIO OFFICIALS SAY YOUTH CAN 'TAKE IT'

Modern College Students Believed to Come to School to Learn. (By Associated Collegiate Press.) COLUMBUS, O.—Modern youth can "take it." At least that's the verdict of prominent Ohio state officials who were asked to comment on published statements of Dr. William P. Tolley, president of Allegheny college, to the effect that young people "can't take it because they never have been trained to do it." The colleges and universities are full of students who are proving their ability to weather tough going, the Ohio State educators said. They cited examples: a boy who works from six to midnight every night in an out-of-town industrial plant; a student with no income whatever, entirely dependant on a board-and-room job (there are lots of these, and they don't all have jobs for both board and room) and student members of police and fire departments.

Wisconsin Coeds Specify Model Youth's Qualities

(By Associated Collegiate Press.) MADISON, Wis.—Specifications for yet another in the endless list of model college youths have been drawn up by University of Wisconsin co-eds, and here they are: The No. 1 gentleman friend smokes a pipe, uses no conscious line, dances well, drinks only in moderation, doesn't try to get a date at the last minute, and restrains his rampant emotions. Most frowned on were two rare species: the collegiate type and the cigar smoker.
