Politicians Change Views on Competition, Monopoly

By PROF. THEODORE BULLOCK

"Why have our leading politicians changed their attitude toward monopoly and competition? Why do Mr. Landon and Mr. Roosevelt demand obedience when former campaigners have advocated reform of the anti-trust laws?" Prof. Theodore Bullock, of the economics department, discusses these current questions in the following article entitled "Competition and the Campaign of 1936."

"Not since the campaign of 1912 have our two major political parties shown an interest in the problem of monopoly and competition comparable to that which they are displaying this fall. The war and post war prosperity lulled both parties into the belief that monopolistic arrangements were probably for the good of the country as a whole. For hand in hand with all sorts of unlawful agreements and understandings went an apparent increase in well being for practically every citizen. Somewhat naively most of us accepted the notion that the relationship between the two was that of cause and effect. We also developed the theory that size and efficiency are synonymous.

"When at last the crash came, economists as well as corporation lawyers and politicians were sure that too much rather than too little competition was at fault. In other words the fact that many of the less enlightened firms persisted in obeying the Sherman and Clayton acts led to gross overproduction, the prime cause of our troubles. Thus reasoned the wise men of the nation.

"It is interesting to read the leading articles appearing in the economic and legal journals of 1931 and 1932. This writer and that strove to point out some clever way of evading or amending our anti-trust laws so that the bogey of overproduction might be ended and glutted markets be come a thing of the past.

A Change in Attitude.

Today all this is changed. Our authorities are almost a unit in demanding a return to competition and the inauguration of the much advertised economy of abundance. Mr. Landon and Mrs. Roosevelt vie with each other in their demand that our antitrust laws be obeyed. Mr. Landon even cites Fetter's "The Masquerade of Monopoly" (Continued on Page 8).

27 OUT STATE BANDS GO ON PARADE BEFORE HUSKER-CYCLONE TILT

Colorfully Bedecked ROTC
Unit Leads Band Day
Festivities.

Led by the University's newly uniformed 96 piece ROTC band, a colorful parade of 27 Nebraska and Iowa high school bands marched into Memorial stadium preceding the Cyclone-Husker grid tussle Saturday as part of the annual Band Day festivities. The junior band made up of 64 freshmen followed the varsity group.

In their flashy scarlet and cream outfits, the senior band formed the letters BIBLE in marching procession, much to the approval of the 29,000 in the stands. After commencing the afternoon's activities with the entrance formation, they played "Semper Fidelis" by Sousa, "March-Gloria" by Losey, and "Stars and Stripes Forever." The crowd joined in the singing of the popular Husker songs.

The freshman band played "Gardes du Corps March" by Hall and "The Gladiator March" by Sousa. George Bacon, drum major of the varsity band and Charles Minnick, captain, lead the procession. The freshman captain for the year is Lyman Spurlock; Ray Harrison is drum major.

Two weeks drill under the leadership of Billie Quick resulted in remarkable skill in marching formation. The many high school bands, in various brightly colored uniforms, marched and played with the two ROTC units on the stadium sod before the game opened.

Rosenlof Claims Secondary School Basis of Democracy

Declaring that each year finds renewed evidences of the peoples' faith in secondary education, Dr. G. W. Rosenlof of the Teachers college faculty, refuted the arguments of the speaker at the annual Harvard Inglis lecture on the subject, "The Mounting Waste in Secondary Education."

"Few share the belief of some of our critics that the continued extension of high school education in a democratized and popularized institution is a mistake," Dr. Rosenlof stated. "Democracy is dependent upon a democratic educational program in a democratically organized system. America will accept nothing less."

University Political Guns Muster Forces

Organization of a University branch of both major political parties got under way on the campus this week. Officers were elected and committees appointed in order that the corresponding platforms of both Landon and Roosevelt may be forwarded as much as possible in the next month. Vigorous enthusiasm has been shown by both groups.

It is the aim of both organizations to bring as many national figures to the campus as possible. Charles P. Taft, brain trust to the Kansas nominee, addressed the initial meeting of the Young Republicans. The opposite camp promises an address by Senator Hugo Black of Alabama during the coming week.

On the editorial page of the Nebraskan today appears a political column, advancing the cause of the democrats. It was the original intention of the managing editors to run Democratic and Republican columns side by side. Due to an arrangement between the partisans, the Republican column will not appear until Tuesday. The Nebraskan is still open to other parties, the editor announced.

REYNARD TO SPEAK ON ETCHER'S WAYS AT ARTIST MEETING

Former Nebraskan Will Give Fundamentals of His Art.

Fascinating processes of making a complete etching will be the main feature of a public lecture by Grant Reynard, a former Nebraskan and the etcher of many beautiful Nebraska scenes which is scheduled for Tuesday at 3 p. m. in Gallery B of Morrill hall.

Mr. Reynard is nationally recognized as one of this country's outstanding artists. His address which is entitled "The Ways of the Etcher" will describe the steps in completing an etching from a bare copper plate to the finished print, including a running account touching on the unusual and the interesting contacts and influences upon which his art is built.

Reynard, who returned this fall to be one of the honored guests at the recent Columbus, Nebraska, anniversary festivities, has a background of particular interest to those who enjoy his work. He has had considerable training in music and has studied throughout this country, Paris, London, St. Ives, and the MacDowell colony. His work has taken him into the theater and the symphony concerts (Continued on Page 8).

CARDWELL GOES OVER FOR THREE TALLIES IN GAME

IOWA STATE OUTPLAYED

Bible Substitutes Freely;
Gopher Coach Bierman
Watches Fray.

BY MORRIS LIPP.

While Bernie Bierman, blue-eyed Gopher mentor, and an estimated record breaking throng of 29,000 grid fans looked on, Coach Dana X. Bible's Huskies ran true to prediction and whitewashed Iowa State 34 to 0. Ames didn't seriously threaten Nebraska's goal once, while the Cornhuskers played in Ames' territory all Saturday afternoon.

Lloyd "Wild Hoss" Cardwell romped over the field to lead the scoring honors with three touchdowns. Sam Francis made the outstanding run of the game when he returned a kickoff 97 yards to score. Bill Anderson, sophomore fullback, accounted for the fifth tally. Francis batted a thousand in converting four out of four attempted placekicks, while Bob Mills missed his one try.

Bench Emptied.

Coach Bible kept a stream of red shirted Huskers pouring in and out of the game, giving nearly every man on the squad an opportunity to play. Ken McGinnis and Elmer Dohrmann, injured veterans, sat on the bench all day.

Nebraska out rushed, out passed and out lateraled the boys from Ames, but Fred Poole's exceptional punting bettered that of both Francis and Anderson. Poole and Neal averaged 41 yards while Francis and Anderson had a combined average of 35 yards.

So many Cornhusker subs were coming in and out of the game that it was difficult to ascertain the stars in the line, who made it possible for the backfield men to make the touchdowns. Seasoned observers thought that there was little difference between Nebraska's first and second teams, which (Continued on Page 6).
