

Huskers Saving Into Big Week of Season on Practice Sod

SATURDAY'S LAXITIES REVIEWED ON SCREEN

With everything to win and nothing to lose, Coach Dana X. Bible's Cornhuskers got under way Monday afternoon for a full week of extensive grid practice before the crucial game with Minnesota's Gophers Saturday.

Before Monday's sweat session, the Huskers gathered in the dressing room lecture compartment and witnessed slow motion pictures taken by Ed Weir during the Husker-Ames contest. Nebraska coaches halted the film intermittently to point out errors in assignments made by the Huskers.

Viewed by slow motion, the Huskers looked exceptionally good in spots and again looked ragged on some plays, but the grid coaches hope to have both offense and defense highly groomed by this weekend. Monday's practice, behind locked doors, consisted largely of group work.

Coach Bible took the backs under his wing to drill them on their running attack against a squad of freshmen. Pass-receiving was the day's work for the ends under Coach Browne, while Coaches Schulte and Lyman put the linemen thru the polishing machine.

Most of the Cornhuskers were fagged out from Saturday's tilt but none received a serious injury in the Ames contest. Gus Peters, who started at guard in Ken McGinnis' stead, received a bad bruise in the rib region at the outset of the game. Bob Ramey, sophomore center, had one hand stepped on by a cleated foot, but neither of the two Huskers are expected to be out when the trip is made to Minnesota.

The Cornhusker squad will not be cut until after the Gopher game, but the personnel of the roster is more or less known, practically all of the men who played last Saturday. A fact that speaks well for itself is that Nebraska's reserves looked amazingly well against Ames, even Bernie Bierman, Gopher mentor, was impressed by their performance.

Elmer Dohrmann and Ken McGinnis, regular varsity end and guard respectively, didn't get in the Cyclone game, but they are expected to be ready for the Gophers this Saturday.

BARB PASS GAMES GET GOING TODAY

Barb intramural competition begins today with three games scheduled to be played. "Russian Flats" north of the 10th Street viaduct is again the site for the struggles.

Twelve teams have filed entries and posted the necessary forfeit fee prerequisite to eligibility for competition. They have been divided into two leagues of six teams each, the winner of each league to compete in the finals for the crown.

Competition among the Greek gridgers rounded into its second week with the competition unusually keen. No less than two games on Monday's program had to be decided by playing the extra six down after the teams had ended the regular sessions in scoreless deadlocks.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon nudged out Alpha Gamma Rho by the slim margin of 1-0. Neither team was able to chalk up a tally during the game, but the Sig Alphas were the best ground gainers during the extra period and walked off with the game with at least a moral victory. Lutz, Thornton and Hunt stood out for the winners with Coleman, Larson and Daft holding up the losers' end.

Phi Deltas Win. The Phi Deltas used the same process to down Sigma Nu, 1-0, in a nip and tuck battle that was undecided until the last play was made. Hart, Klase and Steinmeyer did most of the romping for the Phi Deltas, while Thomas, Townley and Dobson clicked best for the Sigma Nu's.

NEBRASKA FOES ALL WIN GAMES LAST SATURDAY

Not one of Nebraska's 1936 grid opponents lost a game last Saturday, which means it will be up to Nebraska to end some early started winning streaks when the Huskers meet up with their foes. Minnesota was the only exception and that was because the Gophers had an open date.

Indiana whitewashed Centre 38 to 0 in a major eastern game. Reports from the Hoosier camp indicate that Bo McMillin has a plenty strong eleven. Mighty Pitt started out with an impressive 34 to 0 win over West Virginia. Lon Stiner's Oregon Staters beat Willamette 13 to 0 with "Red" Grey in the starring role.

Big Six teams also were in the winning columns. Oklahoma nosed out Colorado 8 to 0. Missouri started the season all right with a 20 to 0 win over Cape Girardeau

State Teachers. One of the hardest Big Six games of the week end was the Kansas-Washburn tussle which the Jayhawkers finally won 19 to 6. Kansas State beat Oklahoma A. & M. 31 to 0.

R.O.T.C. UNITS RECEIVE NEW CANNONS, TRUCKS

Instruction in Engineering, Artillery Divisions Gets Underway.

Four new cannons were received by the R. O. T. C. division of the University of Nebraska. They are modified 75 millimeter guns of French design and were the type in use by the allies in the World War. Each gun weighs more than a ton and has a maximum range of 10,000 yards. In addition to the cannons, twelve trucks and four reconnaissance trucks were received.

Students will be taught to dismantle and assemble four pieces, will be given instruction in the operation of the guns and will be drilled in the service of the pieces.

A total of 425 sophomores and freshmen have enrolled in the field artillery division, plus 55 advanced students, an equal number of first and second year men plus 44 advanced students have chosen the engineering division. Both the engineering and artillery units are new to the university this year. A group of 1,200 are drilling in the infantry.

Varsity Boxing Prospects Grow; Material Good

Bible Will Add Sport to Uni Roster If Enthusiasts Build Support.

According to Athletic Director Bible, only two things stand in the way of Nebraska having intercollegiate boxing: (1) lack of sufficient interest among Nebraska athletes; (2) difficulty of scheduling competition with other universities.

Judging from what happened two years ago when Nebraska's lone venture in intercollegiate boxing turned out to be pretty much of a resounding fizzle, this should be the last competitive sport that the Cornhuskers might care to take up.

But the situation appears much brighter this year—at least, as far as interest and boxing prospects are concerned. Under the tutelage of Coach Harold Matthews interest in the ring sport has risen to a new high. And some of the leather pushers registered at Nebraska have all the points of classy punchers.

Les McDonald edged out Lowell English for the heavyweight championship of the national guard at Ashland this summer, and Bill Callihan is another heavy who ranks among the top-notch amateurs in the country. Lloyd Cardwell, who has also been showing recent interest in boxing, could develop into TNT with his weight and speed.

Among the light heavies and middleweights, Bob Mehring, Al Simpson and Don Flasnick all seem to have what it takes. The Miegel brothers, Ralph and Charley, look good as light weights and Bud Wolfe is a speedy featherweight.

Under the present setup, boxing is given in regular classes and two intra-mural meets are held each year. Several in a boxing class of forty show signs of becoming masters of the ring, but Coach Matthews thinks even a greater variety of material would be attracted if boxing were raised to the status of an intercollegiate sport. "If Nebraska would have a boxing team, I am certain we could get the boys out for it and give a good account of ourselves."

But the other requirement for intercollegiate boxing—that of obtaining competition—is not so easily met. Last year not one school in either the Big Six or the Big Ten, where Nebraska finds most competition, had intercollegiate boxing. The Big Six members have talked the matter over several times, but nothing has ever come of it. Missouri and Kansas have attempted intercollegiate boxing to a limited extent, and in both cases dropped it as no go.

Athletic Director Bible places the issue of whether there will be intercollegiate boxing or not squarely in the hands of those interested. "I think it's up to boxing coaches and those interested in boxing to build up sufficient interest that it may be added as an intercollegiate sport in the various conference schools."

COEDS PLAY SOCCER THURSDAY TO START FALL SPORT ROSTER

14 Teams Already Entered As Miss Bowen Urges More to Report.

Play lots east of social sciences will again become an attraction for students in the adjoining building when the greenblommed coeds open the women's intramural sport program with the soccer baseball tournament Thursday.

The elimination tournament which will be run off in approximately two weeks is being entered by fourteen teams. Their practice is nearly completed. The games will be played on the field east of social science. In case of unfavorable weather the games will either be played in the women's gym or will be postponed.

Stressing the necessity for arranging for practices Pauline Bowen, intramural sports head for soccer baseball urged that more girls sign up for their sport. "I want to see more girls enter into this sport," states Miss Bowen. "We need a great number of girls to increase the competition."

Many girls have come out in previous years to play this game which is played like a regular baseball game except that the ball is rolled instead of pitched and kicked instead of batted. It is hoped that there will be a record number of participants this year. In last year's tournament in which there were twelve teams participating the KBB's were the winners and the Delta Gamma's were the runners up.

Rodney Bertramson, president of the Varsity Dairy club, says there is a meeting scheduled for Thursday evening in Dairy Industry. The club, one of the most active organizations on the campus, plans a get-together for all freshmen interested in dairy. The president didn't say much about it, but he hinted at a mixer soon. The dairy boys furnish good entertainment, too. Also the word, "Refreshments," was featured in the announcement on the bulletin board. There must be a catch to it, tho, because there's a big question mark.
