One-Fourth of Graduate Classes Don't Want Degrees, Statistics Reveal Unusual Enrollment Facts

(Continued from Page 1.) inward horror of the difficulties to be encountered in studying chemistry, is the revelation that this science is the second most popular course selected by the advanced students. Enrolled to study various courses of advanced chemistry are 30 graduates.

Equally surprising is the discovery that the third largest group, 17, is spending its time in studying geography. A course pertaining especially to this part of the country is the one attracting the fourth largest section of the college; agronomy is followed by 16 students. The world of business enters to attract a group of 14, the fifth largest number, who are specializing in economics.

In the college of medicine there are nine men seeking their degrees in four different subjects. In two of these there is but one student studying the advanced work. Equally difficult or uninteresting must be the sciences of horticulture and biochemistry, for but one of the 413 is following each of these subjects.

out, leave room for a new library building between the Union and Social Sciences, if and when a new library is constructed.

The board of regents will be faced with one major problem—that of financing that cost not covered by the grant, amounting to $220,000. At the end of this year, at least $15,000 will have accrued from the $1 registration fee which has been in effect since last summer session and which will be continued as a major means of paying the bill.

Ten thousand dollars has been contributed by the board of student publications, and another $5,000 has been pledged and partially paid by fraternities, sororities, and other campus organizations. This leaves $190,000 to be sought from student fees, gifts to the university foundation, direct donations from alumni, and possibly a legislative appropriation. A bond issue may be floated to provide immediate funds to meet the requirements of the government grant.

TILCHE SPEAKER FOR 'LE CERCLE FRANCAIS'

Political Economy, Modern Psychology Connected in Speech.

Mr. Jean Tilche, of the romance language department, speaking before "Le Cercle Francais," Wednesday evening, brought a very interesting study of contemporary political economy against the background of some current trends in modern psychology.

Alluding to the atomic organization of matter in the physical world, his observations concerned the part played by the individual in the modern complex scheme of things. French musical selections were played by Lenora Tenle. Refreshments were served at the close of the discussion.

Another luncheon will be held Thursday, Oct. 29.

ORGANIZED BARBS TO ENTERTAIN AT PICNIC

Interclub, AWS Councils Greet New Students at Outing.

Sunday morning, from 7 o'clock to 9, barbs will stage a picnic at Antelope park, sponsored by the A.W.S. Board and Interclub council.

Carol Clark, in charge of barb A. W. S. publicity, remarked, "This picnic is an additional get-together in the early morning light, in order to get the barbs acquainted with each other. Besides the breakfast, we will also play games, both strenuous and otherwise. All barbs are urged to join us."

Rain or shine, barbs are asked to meet at Ellen Smith hall at 6:45. Transportation will be furnished to and from the picnic. If the weather is adverse, the home fires will be lighted in the Hi-Y building instead of Antelope park. Tickets are fifteen cents and may be bought at the hour dance at the armory tonight. The charge is to defray the cost of the bacon and eggs.
