SEEN AN AG CAMPUS.

The biggest crowd ever at the ag engineering mixer listening to Eddie Jungbluth's band doing the "little red drum" novelty number. . . . Many balloons hung up but nary a one left unbroken. . . . Elaine Cook and Frank Kingston making arrangements. . . . Old fashioned dresses are being removed from attics or cute aprons made for coeds to don for the Farmer's Formal. . . . Helen Brummond in a good looking rust and brown hat. . . . Ward Bauder selling student directories. . . . Sally Coufal taking English lit notes. . . . Glen Klingman telling of his trip to Seward. . . . Helen Krejci and Sylvia Zocholl always inseparable, hurrying to lunch. . . . a gay bright orange scarf worn by Evelyn Young. . . . Vincent Jacobson in the Rag office handing in farmer's formal news. . . . Smiling Margery Manchester shivering from the cold while going to class. . . . Lawrence Frisbie driving by rather slowly—wonder what's up? . . . Sarah Harman and Hannah Seb entering home ee.

Chi Phi's Hold Sunday Supper.

Thirty couples were guests of the Chi Phi Mothers' club when they entertained at a buffet supper in honor of the pledges at the chapter house Sunday night. . . . Heading the planning committee were Mrs. Raymond J. Pool and Mrs. Herbert Potter.

Kappa Delta's Treat Sweet Tooth.

This time it was Eugenia Martyn, sister in Kappa Delta from Columbus who was the cause of after dinner excitement at that lodge. And the brother who passed El Popo's was Omar Bornemeier, Alpha Sigma Phi from Elmwood.

letics and have definite reasons to know we have succeeded. It is most deplorable when any uninformed person seeks to destroy college athletics by endeavoring to undermine public confidence in those engaged in college sports. . . . I wholeheartedly agree with Preceptor Bible that Mr. Tunis was a most misinformed person when he came out with the assertion that Nebraska is a professional squad. Before he liberated such a statement he should have scrutinized the facts more closely which lead him to such a belief. Where the author of the article obtained information persuading him to believe that the Cornhuskers are professionals is far beyond my comprehension. Evidently he must have gotten some "inside info" to the effect that the Big Six laurel holders are not amateurs.

Tunis Wrong.
It is superfluous to remind followers of Nebraska that Coach Bible's cohorts are amateurs in the most literal sense of that word. They do not receive pay for their doings on the grid field as do the professionals, and he it far from the Biblemen to accept compensation for their work. It is a verity that many Cornhusker stars have turned professional after leaving the university, but I do vehemently contend that Mr. Tunis is in the wrong when he makes the unsubstantiated statement that the Huskers are un-amateurish.

To make things worse, the composer of the Mercury story goes on to say that many football games have been "bought" by gamblers. Be it far from me to confuse this assertion without first delving into its details more minutely, but I have a lurking suspicion that he has also been deceived on this topic. In part, he says: "It has been an open secret for several years that certain highly professional college teams, or rather one or two members of these teams have been reached by gamblers." Personally, I do not see how it is possible for one or two members of a grid team to "throw" a game. It is an old football axiom that it takes eleven men working in unison to play good grid contests, and certainly if one or two players are not playing to the satisfaction of their coach (such would be the case if a plan for "throwing" the game were the aim of one or two team members), they will sooner or later be ejected from the game. Coaches are neither blind nor purblind when it comes to picking flaws in a team's playing.

For those who might have taken Mr. Tunis' story to heart, let your own sports commentator reiterate that Coach Bible's team has an amateur standing. The professional side of football has about as much future at Nebraska as a cake of ice in the heat.
