

BIBLE SAYS 'QUITS' AFTER HARD DRILL ON TIGER TACTICS

Cardwell, Mehring Nurse Injuries as Mentor Sends Huskers Thru Stiff Aerial Practice in Preparation for Missourians.

BY MORRIS LIPP.
Not until the sun dimmed in the cold western sky did Coach Dana X. Bible say "quits" to the Cornhuskers after a long and hard scrimmage session Wednesday afternoon. An aroused Tiger attack is anticipated Saturday and Nebraska's coaching staff isn't leaving any loopholes in the Husker attack.

Lloyd Cardwell and Bob Mehring, varsity halfback and guard respectively, were on the mending roster Wednesday and did not report for the practice. Cardie has a "charley horse" that is bothering his leg considerably, but he is expected to be in shape by Saturday. Mehring sustained a sprained ankle in last week's Oklahoma game, but he took a day off to speed up the healing process.

In Cardwell's right halfback position was Harris Andrews, the substitute back who broke away from the Sooners to score on a 66-yard sideline scamper. If Cardwell isn't ready by Saturday, Andrews will get the call. Lowell English was subbing for Mehring at left guard and may open the game if Mehring's ankle isn't completely healed.

Prepare Pass Attack.

Wednesday's scrimmage opened up with the limbering up exercises followed by a considerable group work. Coaches "Link" Lyman and "Pa" Schulte took the linemen under their collective wings and drilled them on the blocking devices and against each other. End Coach Browne worked with the flankmen for a short time before they rehearsed their pass-receiving duties.

Coach Bible kept the Husker passers for a long time during the passing session which preceded a short punting practice. Nebraska's "social" grid maestro wasn't quite satisfied with the Nebraska aerial attack and made the Scarlet backs and ends work overtime before he declared himself satisfied.

Fresh Coach Ed Weir's best group of gridgers who have been drilling on Missouri plays for two days took the offense against the powerful varsity line. Placards designating the name, position and number of the Tigers' biggest three offensive threats—Captain Al Londe, Henry Mahley and Harry Mason—were pinned on three frosh chests to enable the varsity to see what Mizzou's big three do.

Frosh Impersonate Bengals.

With Herm Rohrig impersonating Mahley as the Bengal left halfback, Roy Petsch as Londe at right halfback, and Eldon McIlerravey as Mason at fullback, Ed Weir's neophytes gave the Huskers everything they had. The frosh threw passes all over the south practice lot, but the varsity secondary batted them down. The frosh attempted to crack the line, but the experienced varsity line either tossed them for losses or held them for no gains.

Game Captain Virg Yelkin and Les McDonald were at the flank posts to halt any attempted end plays, that the yearlings might attempt to pull. Ted Doyle and Fred Shirey plugged the tackle berths. Ken McGinnis and Lowell English prevented any gains thru the center of the line. In the secondary were fullbacks Charley Brock and Sam Francis, halfbacks Ron Douglas and Harris Andrews, and quarterback Johnny Howell to back up the line.

Missouri has a fine collection of plays and formations as demonstrated by the frosh, but whether or not they can score on them remains to be seen in Memorial stadium Saturday afternoon.

Reserves Scrimmage Well.

While the varsity was on the defense against one frosh aggregation, Nebraska's reserves took the offense in another corner of the practice field against another frosh group. There weren't any definite reserve teams as Coach Bible sent them up against the yearlings in an alternating fashion. One reserve squad was composed of Bob Ramey, center; Perry Franks and Gus Peters, guards; Bob Mills and Jack Ellis, tackles; Elmer Dohrmann, Paul Amen, and John Richardson, ends; Ernie White, Marv Plock, Art Ball, Thurston Phelps and Bill Callihan, backs. Plock and Ball were getting loose for many substantial gains in the scrimmage, while

CHI O'S BECOME VICTORS IN 1936 SOCCER TOURNNEY

Sorority Defeats Raymond Hall in Final Game On Tuesday.

Chi Omegas became the victors of the annual soccer-baseball tournament yesterday afternoon when they defeated the team of Raymond Hall by a score of 13 to 9. The tournament was the first of a series of intramural sports contests to be held this year.

The winners won the right to enter the finals last week by their victory over Kappa Alpha Theta, while members of Raymond Hall gained the right to participate in the game yesterday with their defeat of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Outstanding on the Chi Omega team in yesterday's game were Pauline Bowen with four runs, Mildred Kruse with three tallies, and Betty Clizbe and Amy Gray, with two runs each to their credit. Fern Pocht made three runs for the Raymond Hall team.

With the close of the first tournament, intramural teams will begin active participation in Nebraska ball contests.

Sigma Delta Chi.

Sigma Delta Chi will hold a regular luncheon meeting in the Grand Hotel at 12 o'clock.

ROBERT TAYLOR TO SEE HUSKER TILT SATURDAY

The Nebraska-Missouri football game will not be the only attraction in Memorial stadium Saturday. Occupying one of the 35,000 seats, will be Robert Taylor, famous moving picture star, and native son of Nebraska.

Because of a small riot after the St. Mary's game at Los Angeles three weeks ago, when fans found him on the players bench, Taylor will not be introduced to the football fans. Taylor will leave for Hollywood by airplane Saturday evening after the game.

NUBBINS WILL CLASH WITH MIDLAND FRIDAY

Ely Drills Freshman Squad In Diversified Plays At Practices.

Preparing for their important battle with Midland college at Fremont tomorrow, Coach Lawrence Ely pitted his Nubbins yesterday against the frosh reserves and had them run thru the diversified plays to be hurried at the adversary. Off-tackle plays were being employed frequently by the reserves, while the aerial department also received a thorough airing. In the Nebraska Wesleyan game smashers thru the forward rampart brought many appreciable gains, while heaves thru the ether resulted in a touchdown. The squad will embark Friday by bus at 4:30, arriving in Fremont at 6. Coach Ely contemplates on taking about 25 or 30 men with him, about one-half of them to be recruited from the varsity ranks.

the blocking of Phelps and White was good. A third reserve squad was composed of Bob Ray at center, George Seemann and Bill Hermann at guards, George Belders and Jack Hutcherson at tackles, Ken Shindo and Lloyd Grimm at ends, and Bill Anderson, Marv Plock, Art Ball, and Bill Callihan in the backfield jobs. Asher Brown and Jack Mercier alternated at tackle and end. Anderson was the guiding spirit in this group of backfield men.

Bengals Are Aroused.

Tiger Coach Don Faurot, facing his toughest conference assignment when he sends his Bengals against the Huskers, is far from idle in the Columbia grid camp. Last week's 10-0 Mizzou victory over Iowa State was their first since 1931, and as a consequence, the Tigers are aroused to a new pitch of football fervor.

Despite the alarming fact that Missouri failed to complete a single pass against Marquette in their game two weeks ago and their passing was a hit and miss affair against Iowa State, Nebraska's secondary is being groomed in pass defense.

Coach Faurot has been shifting his Tigers around in an attempt to shape the most powerful eleven possible. Frye is the quarterback choice for the Bengals with Captain Londe and Gasparac at the halfback posts and Mondala at fullback. Mahley, Castle and Mason are back reserves who will also see duty.

Londe is Tiger Threat.

Latest forward wall lineup consists of Nelson and Moss at ends, Heidel and Rau at tackles, Simon and Kirk at guards, Beger and Henderson are tops on the list of line reserves. Al Londe, Mizzou captain, is the Tiger man to watch Saturday. He is one of these triple-threat artists who may give the Huskers plenty of trouble. Another powerful Bengal back is Frye who plays nearly every back position well. Mason is the regular fullback who may or may not be ready for the Nebraska tilt, due to injuries obtained in the Cyclone battle.

Prof. Smith Discusses Architecture for Hi-Y

"So-called modernistic architecture is not new to England and the Scandinavian countries," said Linus Burr Smith, head of the department of architecture in a speech illustrated with slides before Hi-Y club members Tuesday evening. According to Mr. Smith, these countries are considerably in advance of the United States in building projects.
