HOLLISTER INTENDS TO MAKE NEW AWGWAN COSMOPOLITAN

Large Number of Contributors to Appear in Revised Humor Publication, Says Editor; Pictures, Make-Up to Change Magazine.

Bill Hollister, new editor of the Awgwan, has one aim in life at present: to make the university humor publication a cosmopolitan magazine. Working toward that end, Hollister has made every effort to enlarge the staff.

"Since humor is purely a matter of personal opinion, our only hope of satisfying the 5,000 or more personal opinions of humor on this campus, represented by the 5,000 or more students enrolled," the editor declared, "is to create a large, representative group of contributors."

Office Redecorated.

The goal of cosmopolitanism is one that has been close to Hollister's heart for some time. As early as last spring, he was laying plans for changes in the Awgwan policies.

One manifestation of the new spirit may be found, perhaps, in

Dr. Pool Condemns Tendency to Publicize Departed Professors, Failure to Cite 'Stay-at-Homes'

Dr. R. J. Pool, chairman of the department of botany, wonders if there isn't a tendency today to play up the number of professors who leave an institution for other positions supposedly offering greater opportunities, thus forgetting all about the men, just as prominent, who chose to remain with a school in spite of other attractive offers.

The University will serve as an example, he says. Many prominent educators here could have gone to larger institutions with substantial increases in salaries, yet many of them elected to remain in Lincoln. The late Professor Lawrence Bruner, one of the greatest of American entomologists, remained with Nebraska until his retirement, when as a matter of fact he could have accepted some of the finest positions not only in the United States but in several foreign countries.

NEBRASKAN APPEALS FOR FLOOD DONATIONS FROM FRATERNITIES

Contributions to Red Cross By Organized Houses Desired.

Asking that fraternities and sororities take up the matter of making contributions to the Red Cross fund at their Monday night meetings, the Daily Nebraskan continues its drive to aid the victims of the flood.

In a statement to members of all the organized houses on the campus, Editor George Pipal states: "The Nebraskan was hardly consistent in publishing the amounts of contributions in its first news stories, for we asked for donations regardless of the sum. In the remaining stories, we will publish only the name of the organization contributing. We hope that every fraternity and sorority will consider a small contribution at the meetings Monday night. First estimates by the Red Cross of flood damage were hardly high enough, and they need much more to effectively provide for the victims."

With $67.15 collected to date, word has been received that several organizations and organized houses have started contribution funds, but no new groups have given definite pledges to the Nebraskan campaign.

Flood Disaster Results in Crying Need for Sacrifices on Part of Those Outside of Desolate Area

Daily Nebraskan Renews Plea to University Students For Cooperation in Helping to Alleviate Suffering in River Valleys.

Nearly a million people are huddled into concentration camps along the desolate Ohio and Mississippi valleys today and only by the contributions of those who are outside of the flood area is this mass of homeless able to survive. Sacrifice has been no uncommon thing in aiding the excellent work of the American Red Cross in caring for sufferers, and person after person has given to this cause whether financially able or not.

Only the other day Lincoln Red Cross workers were visited by a kindly old lady who, despite the poverty which was apparent by her dress and location of Lincoln residence wished to give her aid to the flood refugees. The background of this sacrifice was founded on mother love for this same old lady had a son in the great World war, who had been left on

STUDENT COUNCIL PLANS TO EXPOSE FAULTS OF GROUP

Reorganization of Men's Pep Club Appears Probable.

Student council judiciary committee will decide the fate of the Corn Cobs, men's pep organization, at a meeting of the committee on Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The student pep organization was charged in a motion before the council last Wednesday that it is more inactive than its charter permits, that the organization is not fulfilling the provisions of its constitution and that its co-operation is not dependable.

Monday the judiciary committee, composed of Chairman Jean Walt, Student Council President Arnold Levin, Bill Marsh, Marylu Peterson and Eleanor Clizbe, will meet with the representatives of both the Innocents society and the (Continued on Page 4.)

Mrs. B. E. Moore will address the members of the Charm School on the subject "Pictures and their Place in the Home," when this group, which is sponsored by the Coed Counselors, meets Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock in Ellen Smith hall.

The speaker, who has had much experience with the topic that she will treat, in the picture department of Miller and Paine department store, will illustrate her talk by demonstrations of the correct and modern way to hang pictures, when and where pictures should be used, and how they may be used the most effectively.

Jean Doty, Coed Counselor in charge of the Charm School, especially urges new girls at the university and girls who have never attended these discussions and lecture meetings on charm to come as well as those who have been participating in the school the first semester.

In this woman's charitable estimation, helping an organization which has done so much for humanity, gave her far more pleasure than buying much needed food and clothing.

Contributions Needed. It is an example like this that stops the college student from going blithely on his way long enough to pause and ask himself whether he could possibly sacrifice the least little bit to assist in alleviating the suffering along the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Only a few days ago the Daily Nebraskan started a campaign to raise flood funds in conjunction with the Lincoln Red Cross. The (Continued on Page 7.)
