Ed Weir, Husker mentor with the Hollywood complex, figured he had the DeMillean feature supreme last week when he had a double barreled showing of the Rose Bowl game and the Nebraska-meant to show that the "late" D. X.'s forces played just as good a brand EOWEIR of ball as any From Lincoln Journal, one on the map. Well, the showing came round and Ed had a fairly sizable crowd watching the two carbon copied games. A few were even clutching their seats. They liked the thrilling points of the Nordic-Husker film and waited anxiously for the scoring in the posy bowl.

The second reel became reality and gridders of Pitt were weaving, bobbing and pivoting toward the double stripe for the winning touchdown. Just as the carrier was about to cross the double stripe, the film grew dim, the figures became undistin-guishable, "It was a little cloudy here, but It'll clear up in a min-ute," said Weir, swallowing his Adam's apple and his pride simultaneously. He had missed the winning score and at that moment nonchalance was an absen-

If we were to name a starting eleven for the 1937 season, of course would name the following: At ends we would start Elmer Dohrmann and John Richard-son or Paul Amen; at tackles, Fred Shirey and Bob Mills or Ted Doyle: at guards, Bob Mehring and Gus Peters with George Seemann pushing plenty, and Charlie Brock at center plus plenty of relief from Bob Ramey. In the backfield give us Johnny Howell, unanimous choice for the quarterback post; at halves, Harris Andrews and Bill Andreson or Mary Plock; at full, Bill Callihan. This, of course, is the team we would pick if we were to pick one.

Ends will again be plenty potent and tackles far better than in '36. Guards will be smaller but should have more scrap than a couple of treed cats. With both Brock and Ramey snapping the ball back, there should be few teams in the country that have more "on the ball" than Nebraska.

Howell will provide everything necessary at signal barking with Andrews furnishing that passing arm for the air minded Biff and upholding his duties in blue ribbon style. The other half and the fullback post will take plenty of grooming. Howell will do the kicking without doubt.

As for wins and losses, this department fears the old stand-bys, Minnesota and Pitt plus Indiana and Oklahoma.

"Vacations are a bad thing. They make students forget most of what they know." Prof. Warner Brown. chairman of the psychology de-partment of the University of Calfornia, contradicts the recent findings of two Oregon State college psychologists.

Pralle, after seven minutes of Kansas defense, snatched the ball ong enough to be fouled and converted. Baker slithered in with an interception and let one fly over his shoulder in his traditional easy style and it was Nebraska 13-4.

Still slack in the scoring department, 15 minutes had elapsed before Rogers and Holliday again boosted their tallies. These two buckets were thwarted, however,

Rogers and Noble siezed some golden opportunities to go in for tallies, bringing their mates up to tense and started tossing them into the stands as the Hawkers pulled up. A switch by Parsons and a free toss by Ebaugh brought con-fidence back to the Scarlet.

With the score 28-18. Rogers started a one man rally in a most unorthodox manner. Twice he potted baskets and twice he was fouled in the act of shooting, while the ball was dangling in the air. Thus by making two points from each field goal and a surplus point from one of the fouls, he grabbed points in less than a minute

Amen broke thru and Parsons faked Rogers out of position for a four point gain to stay out of the cluthes of defeat. Wellhausen brought it to 32-25, Nebraska, and from this point on out it was one merry brawl.

Both teams played with racing motors, throwing some away and making some excellent plays. Scoring was done on the turn about fair play system. Kansas scored last as Pralle copped a free throw and Schmidt swished one from the center of the foul circle with seconds to go. Final tally, Nebraska 37, Kansas 32, Parsons and Sorensen not only stood out in points, but also on defense as they grabbed greedily for every loose ball and batted down every stray Kansas shot. Ebaugh turned in a nice account of himself, as did all the Huskers, as he outjumped the elongated Wellhausen most of the evening. No one expected him to even graze a tipoff against such odds.

Wellhausen and Noble were the big show defensively, but Rogers went to town with nine points for high scoring honors.

By the Husker win, Kansas and Nebraska are tied in first spot of the Big Six running with 2 losses per. Both teams have one more game. A slip by either would mean a title forfeit. This is the closest the Huskers have ever been to the title and Coach W. H. Browne was busy smiling as he realized he had engineered the bottom ranking Nebraskans to the top. There was plenty of hand shaking for him to do with congratulators bethe first half.
