Amelia Always Gets Personal.

In this masculinely patterned woman's world, it is refreshing to get at a frankly feminine point of view.

Instead of recording technical memoranda, in the manner of a glorified instrument panel, or weighty ponderings on the eternal laws of the universe, as a mere man might have done, she described the clouds, the water, the lights of the plane—and the making of coffee.

Callin' 'Em As You See 'Em.

Everyone collects phrases which hit pet philological palates. Little twits of language that tease and tantalize are duly preserved and pigeon holed for future reference.

Marriage Extra-America.

When Dr. Kruid upheld so gallantly at the Gridiron banquet that women are better than men, he was no doubt treating of a theme of one of his favorite subjects, marriage.

SATIRE REIGNS AT GRIDIRON DINNER

Werner Goller, who impersonated Adolph Hitler, and Ed Murray as Dean Thompson took active parts in the program but escaped the eye of the candid cameraman.

State Building Fund Issue Faces Senate Vote Monday

Unicameral, as Committee Of Whole, Discusses Revenue Measure.

Legislative bill No. 334, which would bring to the university its much-needed new library, a new classroom building or engineering hall, will face what is likely to be its most crucial test in the legislature Monday morning.

Stated to come before the body while it is in the committee of the whole tomorrow morning, the bill will be discussed and voted upon. Legislative observers have indicated that the opinion given by members of the legislature while in the committee of the whole is indicative of their sentiments when and if the bill comes before the body for final passage.

Half-Mill Levy. The bill provides that a half-mill levy be added for every $1,000 valuation and that the revenue obtained will provide a state building fund. It is estimated by the appropriations committee that, on the basis of the 1936 valuation, the added half-mill would bring approximately $1,029,480 annually.

Slightly modified from the original bill as it was presented by Senator Leland H. Hall of Roseland, the measure now provides that 35 percent of the new fund be given to the university for its building program. To be matched by federal funds, it is estimated that the university would receive about $360,645 each year.

Bill Held Over. The measure came before the legislature last Friday when it was sitting as a committee of the whole but because a number of the members of the appropriations committee were absent on inspection of Nebraska institutions, Senator Frank Brady asked that the bill be held over until Monday. If passed thru the committee of the whole tomorrow morning the measure will then go to the committee on enrollment and review where it will be slated on the special file.

Serving as financial provision for the governor's ten year building program No. 334 embodies Nebraska's philosophy of "pay as you go," and would provide the university with a number of new buildings. Over a period of six years, according to Chancellor Burnett, a new library, engineering hall, building on the agriculture campus, a new structure at the Curtis school of agriculture, and some other structures on the city campus, could be erected.

Name Babies 'Bob' or 'Jean' Dr. Walton Advises Parents

Dr. W. E. Walton of the psychology department of the University may find himself busier than the head of a matrimonial bureau advising bewildered parents of suitable names for their offspring as the result of his latest research regarding the affective value of first names and his theory that odd sounding names and those of ambiguous meanings may definitely handicap a person for life.

HALF HOUR IN PRIVATE LIFE OF A HAIRY HOOFER

Heloise Howell displays two big blue eyes and a big red knee, which she declares she is saving for the bald pate row at "Bar-Nothing Ranch."

Miss Howell, beautiful Nebraska dancer and member of the Kosmet Klub pony chorus, poses for slightly informal pictures of a typical co-ed preparing for her usual Saturday night shampoo, shower and shave. Starting with a zest-giving shower, Heloise plans her dressing and make-up with an artist's technique, allowing only her pale yellow spurt curl to escape the confines of the bathing cap. "Soulful" is the word that campus Don Juans use to describe the fetching eyes of this popular co-ed. As seen in the shower, however, even Drake university's Miss Martin, has nothing on Miss Howell's figure. Miss Howell says, "The water is cold."

Prof. Congdon investigated the schedules of 176 first year students, who enrolled last fall and listed definite hours of employment, and of 18 freshmen men, who because of athletic activities were engaged the latter part of every afternoon. He registered each of these students under the
