

Texas 'Not So Hot' Says D. X. Bible.

By Ed Steeves. It is not certain whether D. X. Bible, with a scalp like a cue ball, read Nebraska News Editor Morris Lipp's account of his return to the coaching staff of Nebraska because of a sunburned top. If he did, perhaps that is the explanation of the Little Colonel's comparison of Nebraska and Texas climate. Most people have congratulated Bible on being able to enjoy the balmy Star state weather during our current spring chill. The little man with the big salary only scoffed at this, however, and told of how this topic was so much hoey. According to him there is no heat, no sun and no sunburn so we guess it is April Fool to Herr Lipp.

Johnny Howell of swelling football fame, now has a part in the pony chorus of the advancing Kosmet Klub show. It occurred to us that if all the pony chorus was made out of Howell timber, the appellation would have to be changed from the delicacy of a "pony" to a full fledged "horse." Adna Dobson, outstanding sophomore guard, also "hoofs" in the production and does a little of his original stooping on the side. By the way, Dobson's style of stooping is as imitable as Valee's nasal nausea. He not only stooges on the side, but on the back, face, and points south. He can fall into or over anything willfully and get up unscathed. At the height of his career he developed a stunt of rolling end over end down a three flight fraternity stairway.

Perhaps it is his scientific knowledge of falling that makes him so tough on the gridiron. Following the "panomine" of correction, two teams were lined up for dummy scrimmage. Dohmann and Richardson ends; Doyle and Mills, tackles; Mehring and English, guards; Brock, center; and Howell, Andrews, Rohrig, and Dodd, backs, made up the varsity eleven.

The second combination included Grimm and Amen, ends; Neprud and Schwartzkopf, tackles; Dobson and Peters, guards; Ramey, center; and Phelps, McIlravey, Anderson and Callihan, backs. Saturday's practice game, one of the final scrimmages of the spring drill, showed more class than any thus far. The backfield was especially impressive with the expected doing as anticipated and the unexpected, surprisingly well. Howell and Andrews accounted for the only touchdowns of the afternoon.

The guard division looms up as probably the strongest department of the grid division with some five men of equal prowess. Mehring and English have been getting the call, but Dobson, Peters, and Pfeiff have been pushing them plenty. Plus this quint there are Sauer, Franks, and Capron, all able aspirants.

Next Saturday Nebraska hopes to stage another and more successful scrimmage with one of the largest coaching staffs in Husker history overseeing. The staff now includes Head Coach Biff Jones, ex-coach D. X. Bible, Line Coach Link Lyman, End Coach W. H. Browne, Freshman Coach Ed Weir, and assistants John Williams and Henry Schulte.

A. LEWANDOWSKI GETS FIRST LOOK AT 1937 HUSKERS

Montana Coach Sees Biff Jones Pan Saturday's Scrimmage Faults.

As Coach Biff Jones pointed a pugy finger at the squad mistakes of last Saturday's scrimmage, Adolph Lewandowski, appointed to the coaching staff this fall, took his first glimpse of the 1937 Huskers last night. Lewandowski comes from Montana U. where he was head coach. He was a former Nebraska end.

From Lincoln Journal. Lewandowski. The first portion of the practice was devoted to ironing out those errors. Blocking, Jones believes, still has ample room for improvement.

Scribe Gives Helpful Hints For Struggling Sport Fans

Dazed Gridiron Followers May Find Solace in Term Definition.

By Ed Steeves. We have long been conscious that you who find difficulty in retrieving your own shirts from a Chinese laundryman, ordering from a French menu, buying fruit from an Italian vender have just as tough a time deciphering the average sports story. We realize that a sports writer has a tongue like a cork screw and spells out with an "x y z." but it's an old clanish custom of the sports scribes.

The style is supposed to bring the athletic contest with all its action to your breakfast table with your ham and companions. Down through the ages the stuff has been handed until now the expert linguist only knows whether Saltillo beat Beaver Center in a baseball game or vice versa or whether the game was postponed because of rain.

Sports Glossary. Since we can not expect to shove a good conventional dictionary into the hands of all sports penners, we will aid you in a second best manner. We will give you somewhat of a glossary to the language of a sports writer.

For example, if a man in a football game traverses around the end with the ball? He skirted the flanks; he lugged the mail around the right; he toted porkhidge over Smith; he ripped across the right extremities with the spheroid; or so many other ways.

The star punts: "He booted the apple; he bounced one off his toe; he pounded one out with his pedals; etc." "c-d-b-w fromohar aord "Hit Pay Dirt."

A touchdown is made: "He swept the double stripes; he jumped into the promised land; he hit pay dirt; he fetched home the scoring bacon; he entered the scoring column standing up, etc."

A basketball player makes a goal in basketball: "He dusted the net; he parted the mesh; he tempered the hoops; he swished one; he sunk a counter; etc."

He makes a free throw: "He converted a foul; he made good on a gratis flip; he claimed a charity toss; etc."

A track man wins a sprint: He busted the tape, breezed in ahead; showed his heels to the pack; burned the cinders first; snatched the blue ribbons; etc."

An athlete is better than average: "He has the stuff on the ball; is the coaches' joy; the apple of the squad's eye; is a flurry of glory; the spearhead; is the trail blazer; etc."

A first baseman makes a putout in baseball: "First sacker put the cold finger on him; the initial bagger sent the kid back to the dugout; the guy on first ended his career for that inning; the first sacker wrote stinko on his run; etc."

26 DIAMOND ARTISTS BRAVE CHILLY WINDS FOR PRACTICE GAME

Varsity Baseballers Take Yanikans With Score Of 10-6.

Braving the chilly wquad the Cornhusker baseball squad staged a practice game yesterday on the ag college diamond with the regulars getting the best of the fray. The Yanikans were held to six runs and three hits by Pitcher Schmadeke who did the hurling for the Regulars. The score was 10-6 in favor of the first stringers.

The Yanikans used three pitchers in an attempt to stem the Regulars' batting spree, but neither Andrews, Volk nor Kovanda could stop them. Kovanda, who is a new find on Coach Wilber Knight's squad, finished out the game for the coach the tosser should develop into a first class pitcher as soon as he gets his tosses under perfect control.
