Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice in Lincoln, Nebraska, under act of congress, March 3, 1879, and at a special rate of postage provided for in section 1103 act of October 3, 1917, authorized January 30, 1922.

Man's Favorite Indoor Sport

Nathaniel Ward was one of the earliest American writers. He emigrated to New England and was colleague pastor at Agawam or Ipswich, 1634-36. He is noted for his liberties with language and sometimes remembered for indulging in the age-old indoor sport for men, criticizing women's fashions.

This being the Fall Fashion edition of the Nebraskan, we withhold comment on shorter skirts and formals for women and the long plain backed, roll-lapelled coats for men. Instead, we give you a taste of old Pastor Ward, whose writing was done, we must remember, when the Indian menace was more than distorted history and the Queen's clothes were reflected months later in the colonies, sometimes even in the Puritan places of worship.

PASTOR WARD: He that to parrots speaks, must pay; He that instructs a fool, may act the unwise.

I honour the woman that can honour her selfe with her attire; a good text always deserves a fair margin; I am not much offended, if I see a trimme (ornament), far trimmer than she that wears it; in a word, whatever Christianity or civility will allow, I can afford with London measure (more than a full yard):

But when I heare a nugiperous (trifle-inventing) gentledame inquire what dresse the queen is in this week: what the nudistertian (of the day before yesterday) fashion of the court; with egge (eagerness) to be in it in all haste, whatever it be; I look at her as the very gizzard of a trifle, the product of a quarter of a cypher, the epitome of nothing, fitter to be kicked, if shee were of a kickable substance, than either honour'd or humour'd.

To speak moderately, I truly confesse it is beyond the ken of my understanding to conceive, how those women should have any true grace or valuable vertue, that have so little wit, as to disfigure themselves with such exotic garbes, as not only disantifies their native lovely lustre, but transclouts them into gent-bar-geese, ill-shapen shoten, shell-fish, Egyptian hyeroglyphies, or at the best into French flirts of the pastery, which a proper English woman should scorne with her heels; it is no myrvell they wear drailles (trailing head-dresses) on the hinder part of their heads, having nothing as it seems in the fore-part, but a few squirrels brains to help them frisk from one ill-favored fashion to another.

These whimm-crown'd shees, these fashion fanying wits, Are empty thin brain'd shells and fiddling kits.

I have been a solitary widower almost twelve years, purposed lately to make a step over to my native country for a yoke-fellow; but when I consider how women there have tripe-wifed themselves with their eladments, I have no heart to the voyage, least their nunous shapes and the sea, should work too sorely upon my stomach. I speak sadly; me thinks it should breake the hearts of English-men, to see so many goodly English women imprisoned in French cages, peering out of their hood-holes for some men of merxy to help them with a little wit, and no body relieves them.

I point my pen only against the light-heeld beagles that lead the chase so fast, that they run all civility out of breath, against these ape-headed pullets, which invent antique foote-fangles, merely for fashion and novelty sake.

The world is full of care, much like unto a bubble; Women and care, and care and women, and women and care and trouble.

In introducing Nathaniel Ward to her American friends, Miss Pound remarked that men designed women's clothes and merchants sold them. The women are only victims.

Inquiring Reporter

Merrill England

This is the fashion editor. So, elsewhere in this issue, you will find very positive statements, written by the men who make their living selling clothes, of what the well dressed man and woman should wear. But, here, we hope to show you what he will wear.

In our opinion, certainly not called for but expressed anyway, we have just two peevish as to the fall styles:

1. We haven't any money to spend on them.

2. But if we had, we'd buy a few gross of these too-narrow-bottomed slacks and use them to start a fire.

We asked them the type of clothes which they prefer to wear to school.

Mary Giunta, Bizad Sophomore: "I hate to see high-heeled shoes and girls dressed as though they were going to a party. On the campus, I prefer sport shoes, skirts and sweaters, and suits. Some sort of a hat should be worn. Girls should not wear fancy jewelry on the campus."

You can always tell the girl who really knows clothes, by those she has on for the occasion."

Grant Reed, Bizad Freshman: "Sweaters, odd coats, suits—or any combination of them, as long as they harmonize. If the suit is brown, for example, the shoes should match. Shirts, ties, and socks should match."

Another point on personal appearance—a fellow should be clean shaven, and lay off loud clothes and short haircuts."

Anne Hoffman, Bizad Freshman: "Skirts, sweaters, sport dresses, suits, and positively no anklets." Evile Younger, Law college freshman: "Cardigans and quarter-sleeves at least—that's what I'm going to wear as soon as I save up money enough to buy a new pair of cordis."

Return of French Cuffs, Pocket Watches, Stick-Pins Mark Trend Of Men's Fashions to 'Gay '90's

Despite all protests to the contrary, men's fashions will change. Right now, the trend is back to the days of the Gay Nineties, even to using the same materials in clothing.

Recently "Apparel Arts," book of exclusive fashions for men, scouted some of the most exclusive and fashionable balls and theater openings in London, and discovered that plain white cambric has come back into favor for dress shirts, waistcoats, and ties.

This is a radical change from the piques and marcellas which have held the spotlight during the past ten years, in spite of the fact that the use of white cambric for dress wear dates back a good hundred years to the days of the almost legendary Beau Brummel. As used today, this cotton fabric, which has a high, formal gloss, contains no pattern whatsoever.

White Pearl Studs. It has also been noted that, while white pearl studs are used for the shirt, black waistcoat studs have received the stamp of approval of young men in the world's fashion centers. These black studs are edged with white, and are very closely spaced.

Further evidence of the revival trend may be found in the style of the old-fashioned watch fob with its heavy golden splendor, which is replacing the formerly popular silver key chain. The gold watch fob, considered the only type correct with the tailcoat, marks one more instance of the returning popularity of gold jewelry for town wear.

More Jewelry Spotted. "The return to gracious living," as "Apparel Arts" so aptly expresses it, "sounds like a line cribbed from a silverware ad, but it applies none the less aptly to the strong comeback that is currently being staged by men's jewelry." More men are sporting jewelry today than for some years past; not only that, but there is a noticeable

Highlights On the Air

BY ELWOOD RANDOL.

Like the postman who went for a walk on his day off, Harry Johnson, KFAB baseball announcer, is spending his vacation at the world series in New York.

Carson Robison's Buckaroos are famous from coast to coast and have a large following in the British Isles, but no Englishman would know what was meant if he heard the word "Buckaroo." Carson always labels his famed act "The Pioneers" when broadcasting over BBC and appearing in London music halls.

French Cuffs Favored. In line with the general revival, the return of the cuff link is receiving some attention, along with the shirt carrying French cuffs. Preference is for the intimated link, with a modern version carrying a cut-out monogram. Along with the cuff links, we see the gold safety pin, which is worn in the collar.

One of the most promising types of jewelry, which is now in favor on many midwestern campuses, is the sporting motif stickpin. The introduction here from England, it appears to be once more headed for fair weather sailing. Pins being worn by fashion leaders are often quite expensive, being sporting designs set in diamonds or other precious stones. However, the acceptance of this type of personal adornment is expected to lead to its later appearance in gent's gear among the lesser leaders, and eventually, an inexpensive form for the masses.

Will the fashions of today and tomorrow lead us eventually back to the days of Diamond Jim Brady? Return of the white cambric for dress clothing, the heavy gold watch seal on its black ribbed silk ribbon; acceptance of the gold pocket watch with a heavy gold chain; appearance of the diamond stick pin; these are causing fashion-watchers to look to their histories.

BLACK VELVET, TAFFETA, SATIN HIGHLIGHT THE WINTER SEASON.

Twins May Shine. For those twins who just must dress alike, even on the dance floor, there are twin ballet dresses, one of black tulle with lightning streaks of silver paillettes, and the other of white tulle with scrolls of black spangles. The new short hemline of course plays an important part this season and the revival of the uneven hem displays to advantage pretty ankles.

No costume would be complete without some hair ornament, and every perfectly coiffed head must either wear a plume, a golden bird, or fresh flowers.
