

Follow the Sparrows Back Home.

We humans who aspire to be great cagles or exotic birds of paradise have a lot to learn, it would seem, from the sparrows. By this we do not mean their omnipresence, their vulgarity, or their untidiness. Common, unlovely little birds, sparrows. But these least of these represent a fable. a hope, a faith. Was it not the Book nobody knows that claimed: that sparrows do no falling with-out the father's knowledge? (Matthew 10:29).

This ideal is a haven we high flyers scorn when the soaring is good. We would be mightier than sparrows-powerful, beautiful: respected. Sparrows are none of these. We need no one to note our falling-there just ain't goin' to be one. But there comes a time when we feel that the sparrows may have a pretty good racket after all.

Home a Hole in the Wall.

The sparrows around U hall, for instance, need not bemoan their fate. None of the collegiate bigwigs or their reflected glory baskers have yet achieved a niche in life so high or so cozy as that of the brassy little cheep cheepers. One gang of them has long found itself a soft spot in a nest sized hole near an imperfectly set in window frame.

Nothing fancy, you understand, but comfy. There's a sun deck just overhead on the peeled faced limestone window ornamentation. The yard in front of the place is sufficiently isolated to be quite exclusive, yet accessible to the boys for get-togethers and feeds. But sas on November 6. above all the home nest is protected, by its southern only exposure and sheltering corner, from the chill winds of Mother Nature, and from the dry, hot air of the journalism and debating classes next door by the shutters of the rangements window ventilator. To both wind and windedness we poor students have no nearly adequate windbreak.

Home Sweet Home.

The life of a fall-watched sparrow is sweetly devoid of complications. He need not carn himself his wherewithal for cigarettes, silk hose or house bills. Food, or whatever he cats, is comparatively available. If he gets tired of his old woman, there are some more chipples to be had. If he goes to bat with Sonny for coming in way after sundown, he can yell his head off, and there is no one to tap on the walls. In short, the Fall-Guy seems to have him fixed up

Dr. Phillips Thomas Offers Lecture-Demonstration On Phenomena.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Dr. Phillips Thomas, prominent research engineer of the West-inghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, will present 'Ad-ventures in Electricity' before the third all engineering college convocation of the week tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock in room 206 of mechanical engineering hall. The engineers' executive board has arranged for Dr. Thomas' appearance, and the convoca-tion will be held jointly with the Lincoln Engineers club.

In his demonstration lecture of electrical phenomena, all of which have been put to practical service, Dr. Thomas will show the complete functioning of an engineering organization, from the inception of an idea, through research which solves the theoretical problem; to the engineering steps responsible for the completed product. The entire exhibit was personally designed by him especially to demonstrate the principles involved in his discussion, and it all fits into a large automobile which he drives from place to place.
