Take Me Out to the Ball Game

"Goodness, isn't there a crowd here tonight, George. There isn't a decent seat left. Oh, no, let's don't go up in the balcony. Don't you remember what an awful time we had behind the beam at the last game? I couldn't see a single thing what with you explaining the rules to me and that girl in the blue formal trying to keep her shoulder straps in place and distracting my attention. What? Yes, I know she was in the opposite balcony but it just put that much more strain on my eyes. Why don't we sit at one end right under the goalposts?"

PLAYERS PLEASE FIRST NIGHTERS IN NEW DRAMA

Miss Burt Draws Applause In Difficult Role In 'I Know Her.'

The University players have done extremely well by Harold Felton's new play, "I Know Her," whose world premiere they are currently giving on the Temple theater boards. Their achievement is all the more praiseworthy when one considers frankly that Mr. Felton hasn't provided for them too generously with his play. "I Know Her" has been written around an unusual theme. It concerns a young woman who is constantly impelled by a "perfection complex" which makes her determined to run the world around her in accordance with her own wishes and ideals. That she is none too capable of such an exalted responsibility is the sad but true fact that Mr. Felton's play points out.

Henzlik Praises Changes In Teacher Training Work

With the reorganization of the teachers training work approved by the board of regents, Dean F. E. Henzlik, of teachers' college, endorses the new requirements on the grounds that they will relieve the confusing number of kinds of certificates that have previously been causing chaos in the Nebraska educational system, and they will assure teachers better preparation for securing a position as well as preparing them to teach certain subjects. The reorganization of the teachers' course follows the certification law passed by the legislature which will go into effect in all teachers' training departments in Nebraska, Sept. 1, 1938. Change Institutional Certificates. Under the new program, institutional certificates, such as the university teachers' certificate which was formerly granted by the university, are now to be granted by the state department of public instruction upon the recommendation of the faculty of the teachers college thru the board of regents. In this way, the state superintendent will grant all certificates. Under the old law, the university

Dr. F. E. Henzlik, dean of teachers' college, is one of many as 20 different kinds of certificates, while under the new law, the certificates to be recommended will be principally the Nebraska junior elementary. (Continued on Page 2.)

Red Ink Covers Collectivist Ledgers, Says LeRossignol

Dean Tells in Book Review Of Nazi, Communist, Fascist Finances. "Fortunately or unfortunately, economic conditions in the collectivist states are far from satisfactory. Italy's finances are in a bad way; Germany is sacrificing prosperity on the altar of patriotism; and soviet Russia has starved and liquidated millions of her people for the sake of industrialization and agricultural collectivization," says Dr. J. E. LeRossignol, dean of the college of business administration at the University of Nebraska, writing a review of W. H. Chamberlain's new book entitled "Collectivism: A False Utopia." "Fascists and nazis shudder at communist brutality, while communists cry out against fascist barbarism," states the dean. "Actually it is a case of the pot calling the kettle black, for they are all tarred with the same stick." Advances Made at Great Cost. According to Chamberlain, who has spent many years in Russia, democracy's prospect of survival in the face of the challenge of

AG ENGINEERS TO HEAR ADDRESS ON WELDING

Thomas B. Johnson Speaks Before ASAE Group Wednesday. Thomas B. Johnson will speak on the subject of "Welding" Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Nebraska chapter of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. Mr. Johnson is an experienced authority on the subject and has been associated with the agricultural engineering department for a number of years. He will stress in his talk the practical side of the process but will also discuss some theory on fluxes and welding rods. In all probability, during the business part of the meeting, a departmental chairman to head agricultural engineers in preparations for Engineers Week this year will be elected, according to Pete Burns, president of the society. New officers to head the society for next semester will probably not be elected until the first meeting of the new term. Tomorrow night's meeting will begin at 7:30 and will be held in Room 206 of Agricultural Engineering Hall.

Collier's Guide to Lovers of 1896 Advises Timid Girl to Confide All To Mother, Doubt Own Judgment

By Fred Harms. Men may come and men may go, but the rules of courtship change with every generation. A far cry from the modern "woo pitching" stripped of nearly all conventionalities is that of 1896 when the fairer sex was still the weaker one, and when a gentleman wooed at length and under the eagle eye of a third party. Entitled "Etiquette of Courtship and Matrimony," a section of Collier's "Complete Book of Knowledge" published in 1896 gives a pretty good idea of the old conception of woman as a "shrinking violet." Tells Mother All. Under the heading, "First Steps in Courtship" we find this homely bit of advice for the happy girl who has begun to feel the stirrings of love in her bosom: "At a juncture so critical in the life of a young, inexperienced woman as that when she begins to form an attachment for one of the opposite sex—at a moment when she needs the very best advice, accompanied

Wide Popularity Trails 'Creative Thinking' Course

When Prof. Robert P. Crawford established in the university a few years ago a course called "Creative Thinking," he had little inkling that it would become nationally known. William Seabrook, famous author and lecturer, recently sent him a 125-word telegram stating that a national publishing house has proposed that he (Seabrook) undertake a series of articles and book on what American educational institutions are doing to teach people to think. "I want to begin the series by an article about you and your course in creative thought," he telegraphed. Mr. Seabrook proposed to come to Lincoln immediately by airplane and sit in Mr. Crawford's courses for a whole week.

Psychological Factors Assist Merchant's, Nominee's Success

Alike Says Professor Guilford. Just because one candidate in an election receives three times as many votes as another in no way indicates that the vote-getting strength of the one man is three times as great as that of his rival, according to Dr. J. P. Guilford, professor of psychology. In a discussion concerning several improvements in the matter of finding scale values for products from the numbers of first choices, Dr. Guilford points out in a recent issue of Psychometrika that the example of two political candidates is just as applicable to two products offered on the market. Just because one product establishes a volume of sales twice that of a similar product is not a true indication that it is twice as popular as its competitor. Men, Products Similar. Whether one is concerned with counting ballots or sales records, it is only after an analysis of the men or products from the point of view of their stimulating value and an understanding of a scientist
