McBRIDE PROMOTED, LEAVES STAR

For more than 16 years Gregg McBride has been writing for the Lincoln Star and the Omaha World-Herald covering high school and college sports. During those years McBride has known every athlete and coach of any importance in the state. This week end announcement comes from Omaha that McBride has been appointed head of the Herald's new Lincoln bureau and will be working for the gate city paper exclusively. He is to be in charge of all news coming out of Lincoln but will still give most of his time to sports. We take this opportunity to congratulate Gregg on his promotion and express our sympathies to the Star readers who will miss the regular columns by Nebraska's ace sports writer.

Complaints have filtered into this office concerning the students staying on the tennis courts too long. The charge is that players stay on the courts all afternoon while others are waiting to play. Students should correct the fault themselves rather than have the officials exercise rigorous control over the courts.

Center Jump Again.

Those who have been thinking about the elimination of the center jump in basketball had a good chance to observe the working of the rule last week when the state high school cage tourney was held in the coliseum. It could be seen that the main purpose of the change, namely to speed up the game, is accomplished. The game moves swiftly from one court to the other and the team that may be trying for a goal one second will be defending its goal the next.

One of the two charges most frequently heard is that the game is too fast and that the increased speed causes physical defects to develop. This contention is doubtful. If the players are in perfect physical condition there should be no danger in the swift pace of the game.

Penalize Offense?

Another of the charges is that the rule abolishing the center jump penalizes the team on the offensive by having to give up the ball just because they scored. A rallying team was seen in action on many occasions in the tourney but the one most impressive was the Lincoln rallies in both the Creighton Prep and the Ainsworth games. The Red and Black trailed at the beginning of the fourth period in both games and in both instances the Beechler crew chalked up ten points while limiting the opposition to two digits.

Lincoln was forced to relinquish the ball after each field goal, too. This seems to indicate that the offensive team, in this case Lincoln, is not too much of a disadvantage if they play a fast break, have good personal guards and can keep the ball under control.

Nick Francis, the dashing Links forward, got the ball away from the opposing players time after time before they got into offensive territory. This type of defensive work will likely receive more attention as the game develops under the new rule. In the meantime, the charge that the rules are unfair seems to grow more doubtful.

Upson, and Maxine Durand. Applications for the scholarship must be in Dean Upson's office by April 1, and the winner will be determined by the committee in a special meeting the following week.

HUSKER ATHLETES DIVIDE ACTIVITIES BETWEEN SPORTS

Schulte to Stress Work In Weight Department This Week.

Considerable attention will be devoted to two events, the shot put and discus, this week by Coach Schulte. The shot and discus men, Bob Mills, Charlie Brock, and Bill Pfeiff, will divide their attention between track and football for a few days. In about a week, they will devote all their time to track.

None of these three men have worked out for track since the start of spring football, and have gone a bit stale in the shot, Mills, taking a few heaves last night, had difficulty in getting forty-six feet. He has done forty-nine already this year. Mills is Nebraska's big hope in both the shot and discus. Work will be started on these two events tomorrow, one day being devoted to the shot and the next to the discus.

Also due to return to track from football soon, are Jack Dodd, dashes and broad jump, and Marvin Plock, dashes.

Brownlee Reports.

John Brownlee, distance man, reported for work yesterday for the first time since the Minnesota dual meet. Brownlee injured his foot in the Minnesota meet, and has been kept out of action by that, plus a typhoid inoculation. Anton Krejci, who pulled a leg muscle in the dual with Kansas State, is also in shape again and ready for hard work.

From now on, the Husker coaches and varsity men, will help coach high school cindermen on Friday and Saturday afternoons from 2:30 to 6 p. m. The Nebraska track will also be donated for the use of the high school stars, who must, however, furnish their own equipment.

Beginning tomorrow night, Coach Schulte will appear with John Bentley on the latter's radio sports program over station KFAB. Each Wednesday night, Schulte and Bentley will discuss some track event. The event to be used tomorrow is the shot put. If this first program meets with favorable reception from the high school athletes of the state, for whom it is intended, it will be continued, and made a weekly feature during the track season.

To 'Win Friends, Influence People,' Be Sincere, Honest, Says Carnegie

what a Barb was, the term being unfamiliar to him. The fraternity system, he believes, is valuable because of the group activities it sponsors.

"What really matters is whether or not you are mingling with people. The Barb can get into other, if not fraternal, activities. Public speaking and, he smiled at the reporters, "the work you're doing is the best training in the field of winning friends and influencing people."

"The ideas in my book are all in the Bible. A lot of preachers use my book in giving their sermons. In fact it is used as a textbook in one theological seminary, and some Sunday school teachers use it instead of the Bible."

Business Man's Bible.

A course dealing with human relationships, he thought, should be taught in schools and he could see no reason why it is not now. He prophesied that for the present generation's grandchildren it would be a required subject.

Defending his book against the charge of putting friendship on too commercial a basis, Carnegie explained that it was written for business men, with business illustrations and is applicable to business situations. He didn't expect housewives, students and others to take it up.

"No," Carnegie answered the charge, "a person is more successful in business if he does not put things on a commercial basis, but on a sincere, honest service foundation."

Born a farm lad in northern Missouri, the visiting author said he worked in Nebraska for a time, finally coming to his work in New York teaching business men how to speak, Carnegie says that his heart is still in Missouri and Nebraska, on the farm. Indeed, he still owns a farm in Missouri and is much interested in it.
