

ARCHEOLOGISTS PLAN SUMMER FIELD TRIP

Eastern Branch of Niobrara Selected as Location for Excavations.

Nebraska archeology and soils history have attracted the attention and interest of M. L. Wilson, undersecretary of agriculture, at Washington, D. C., who was in Lincoln last week where he spent some time with Dr. E. H. Bell, assistant professor of anthropology, and Dr. William Van Royen, physiographer, going over the field work that has been done to date. Wilson, according to Dr. Bell, is interested not only in the problems of land utilization and climatic cycles, but is also concerned with what has happened to land here in the past and how prehistoric civilizations have reacted to these early climatic fluctuations. The Washington official is planning to return to the university later in the spring to go with Dr. Bell and Dr. Van Royen on a visit of the principal sites in northeast Nebraska, including the famous Lynch excavations.

Ambitious plans are already under way for continuing the field research along the eastern extremities of the Niobrara river. The general problem this summer, says Dr. Bell, is to make a thorough archeological survey and a series of excavations at strategic points following up the leads obtained during the work of the past few summers.

Coeds Want Wedding Rings, Not Sheepskins, Men Claim

(Continued from Page 1.) fine winter resort, too," said Ed Murray, former Daily Nebraskan editor. "You want a husband, you want an education, you want to be amused. In most cases, of course, other reasons also play a part."

Pursue Wedding Ring. John Stoddart of the Beta house took the position that the parents, not the girls, were the ones who planned marriage as an end result of college. According to Stoddart, the girls come to school for a good time, while their more farsighted parents send them because they see a marriage license in the offing. "The folks want to send them down to get rid of them," Stoddart explained. "Girls who can't find husbands will be stenographers or kindergarten teachers."

General cynicism prevailed among the men concerning the place that desire for higher enlightenment had in bringing the coeds to school. Even providing that the girls are serious in their educational aspirations the first year, according to Paul Wagner, Alpha Sig, "the second year they probably come to school for a good time." Wagner and Don Nabity, Delta Upsilon, agreed that the girls went to school largely because they were expected to go, and chose Nebraska because it was the biggest school in the state, and because they couldn't afford to go elsewhere.

The One Year Snatch. "Those girls who stay here long enough to get a degree probably are sincere in wanting to follow out a vocation," stated Al Lefferdink, of the Sigma Chi house. "But lots of girls you see on the campus only one year. They come to get a husband, and if they don't get one the first year, they haven't the ambition to keep on with their studies."

The majority opinion was voiced by Ed Steeves, Sigma Nu former society scribe, who said: "Coeds come down to get a husband, but some don't start looking soon enough."
