and not to our title hopes.

I will grant you that it looks as the the Huskers may not repeat this year, but my observations of the team this year and my examination of the records of meets last year and this give me every hope to believe that Nebraska's chances of scoring in every event are at least fair. And you must admit that there is a difference between winning a meet and in scoring in every event. A team may take fifth in all the events, and yet have only 15 points at the end, but, as was the case in the indoor meet this year, a team may score in only a few tients (seven this year to be exact) and yet win the

Did Bentley Misread,

If you thought that I appeared the words "win the meet handily." Let's briefly review that story. First of all, I pointed out that on the present Husker team are men who scored in all but five of the events in last year's outdoor meet. For your benefit, these events in which scorers are back this year are the 440, 880, mile, two mile the high and low hurdles, the javelin, broad jump, and mile relay. Then I said that six Huskers had taken first in the indoor meet and ing in each of those events, which you must admit is true. To make this story short, I then gave evidence that our chances of scoring were good in all events but three, namely the two dashes and the pole vault, and that they were not so good here. If that mays "win the meet" I will retire as sports writer, which I don't expect to do for some time. You also said that we didn't have a first place cinched. May I point out to you that Bill Gish in he low hurdles, Ray Baxter in the high jump, Harwin Dawson in the broad jump and Bob Simmons in the 440 have not been beaten by any conference opponent this year Surely there should be one first place in that group. Yours for more accurate reading.

Last week Nebraska dropped two games to Missouri, the second by a score of 14-0, indicating that they are not as strong as the Big Six teams Kansas has played. Hitting Weak.

In the games to date the Jay-hawks have not hit as hard and consistently as the team of last year, Ferrel Anderson and Paul Holcom, holdovers from last year are showing up well at the plate, but have not had much help from their teammates.

The work of the team in the field has been satisfactory, although several costly errors were made at Ames. These latter were due mainly to a slippery grass infield which resulted in players slipping and failing when they started suddenly after batted balls.
