First May Queen at University Here

A spectator who created a stir of interest in the Ivy day crowd at the university Thursday was Mrs. Lewis Anderson, sr., who was the first May Queen of the University of Nebraska in 1912. She was before her marriage.

Miss Louise Barr. Mrs. Anderson, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, was also elected to Mortar Board. Her husband was elected to Innocents the same year. Mrs. Anderson has three children at the university. In the picture, left to right, are Lewis, jr., a junior and a Phi Delta Theta; Marie, a freshman, Mrs. Anderson and Alice, a junior, all members of Kappa Alpha Theta.

Open House Night Draws Crowds to Novel Displays

Thousands of spectators thronged through ten buildings on the university campus last night as students in various departments played hosts to the on-lookers. Open houses were held by student engineers, pharmacists, geologists and artists. Many interesting features displaying the progress of science were arranged for the visitors, the entire affair bearing resemblance to a small World's Fair. Taking part in this year's activities for the first time was the military engineering department, whose exhibit was located at Nebraska Hall. In front of Nebraska Hall was a sentry on duty at a replica of a castle, the insignia of the army engineers.

At Morrill hall an interesting geological exhibition attracted a large crowd. There was a large display of diamonds and many relics of themuseum drew favorable comment from the spectators. On the second floor of the museum was an exhibition of student art work and a demonstration of students working on paintings, pencil sketches, and other works with an Art Carnival open to the public. Pharmacy students performed many experiments in the pharmacy building. There were demonstrations of the boiling and melting points and specific gravities of various substances. Various forms of engineering

Students did not attend a house warming at the Student Union building Wednesday night but rather of the Student Union in the Student Activities building. The building has been mislabeled by the student body, for the corner stone clearly states that it is the "Student Activities Building." Kenneth Van Sant, director of the Student Union says that the Student Union is the organization and is to be differentiated from the building, in which it is housed. Many of the buildings on the campus have received a nickname and it seems quite fitting and proper that this building should have one. Students on other campuses where there is such a building usually call it the "Union."

Even Uni Hall's Moss to Migrate to Student Union

The north wall of the School of Journalism library in University hall has come to life. Thriving on the wall paper, moist from frequent rains, is a green growth of a species of moss of fungus. Picture the rooms, students, in several months. Imagine yourselves walking into a library carpeted with moss, a ceiling reassembling an overhanging garden, and walls decorated with ivy. Imagine yourselves sorting a newspaper from a pile of foliage. Imagine yourselves using grass blades for book marks. But, you need not imagine. Take a couple of books to the greenhouse, and study for an hour for the effect.

There is but one drawback. The fungus is awfully young, and when it is old enough to know where it is living, it will, no doubt, promptly follow Mr. Bruce Kame's cockroaches to the new Union building.

without burning a sense of responsibility within him." The emotions of the audience reached their zenith when the law college senior traced the career of an innocent youth who, thru lack of parental advice, was inveigled into the criminal ranks. "Let us take the career of an ordinary boy who dreams someday of becoming a notorious gangster," stated the speaker. "First of all, there are the worried days and nights in which his parents know that he is lying about his activities, in which he himself begins to adopt a different attitude from his previous one of open-handed innocence. Suddenly there comes the shocking news that he was the boy who pulled the trigger when the storekeeper resisted a robbery and he is the boy who stands charged with murder."

Home Aids Crime.

That great institution, the home, also came in for a scolding for its part in the crime wave. Of the home's role in the making of a criminal, Gursko said, "The father whose child constantly hears him talking of gambling, or using profanity while under the effects of intoxicating liquor, is himself committing a crime in that he is paving the road which will lead his own flesh and blood in the filth of crime. He is placing in that child's brain a picture that crime is a field of romance."

AN ORGANIZATION ANY FOOL CAN JOIN
 Any fool can join an organization. Ever since last September, the Daily Trojan has taken the stand that a university was an institution founded for the purpose of training students' intellects and not the place for teaching the social graces or for instructing students how to spend their leisure time pleasantly. Students are already too well versed in the means of dissipating both time and effort. What they need most is a rigorous intellectual training; and the way to get this type of training is not by joining certain campus organizations whose purposes—as far as a university is concerned—are questionable. They are questionable in the sense that they serve no good end either for the university or for the members. Students may say that the "service" organizations do a large amount of work for the university. Possibly, but it is not true that tuition is paid to a university so that the students can devote their time to study? If this is not true then why do the "service" organizations confine their activities to ushering at games, concerts and rallies? There are furnaces to be tended; there are hundreds of the classrooms to be swept; and there are thousands of dirty dishes that

Student Pulse

Dear Editor:
 It was little Wilbur Beesley who first set me on fire with this colorful idea. With a modern trend afoot, precipitated by the opening of the Student Union, it seems that there should be an innovation in the mode of dancing here at Nebraska. Why not call it open season on "cut" dances? Haven't we been prigs long enough? As several fellows have pointed out, we're in a rut. That worn out adage, "Variety is the spice of life," still holds true, you know. Ask anyone who has been to a dance at Kansas U. how they do it down there, and he will tell you that anyone at K. U. who doesn't cut is a social outcast. At other schools, too, the "cut" craze has caught hold and is spreading like the proverbial wild-fire. The opening of the union marks the advent of a renaissance, a new birth of fellowship and cooperation. It has for its purpose the bringing together of students into a more closely knit union. Would not the "tag" dances, whereby all students get to know each other better, be in keeping with this trend? We cannot dissolve social barriers by remaining aloof and indifferent. Let's make the Student Union a true "union" and catch up with the times! Gordon Jones.

MISS WALTERS, DON BAYLES WIN UNION SOUVENIRS

Miss Pauline Walters, home ec senior, and Donald Bayles, Arts and Sciences junior, were the grand prize winners of the souvenirs given at the opening of the Student Union Wednesday evening. Miss Walters will receive a Helena Rubenstein cosmetic set, and Mr. Bayles will receive a five dollar certificate of credit at Miller & Paine's. To make certain that a member of the university received the grand prize the original plans were altered somewhat. Dr. G. W. Foulner of the teachers college faculty stopped students at random and requested them to identify themselves. If they could produce their identification cards, they were given prizes.
