

GARDEN CLUB SHOWS FLORAL ARRAY AT AG

Lincoln's Prize Flowers Make Up Exhibition May 21, 22.

Sponsored by the Lincoln Garden club, the annual flower show will be held in the Activities building at the agricultural campus May 21 and 22. The exhibition will include iris, peonies, garden flowers, artistic arrangement of flowers, and special displays.

Two instructors at the college of agriculture, Miss Bess Steel, associate professor of home economics, and Miss Evelyn Metzger, assistant professor of design, will be in charge of the wall niche arrangements.

The schedule of classes of entry for the show are in the hands of the members of the Lincoln Garden club, at the city library and at the office of Dr. Barbour in Morrill hall.

No Countenance Reveals Crime, Says Thornton

By looking at a criminal's photograph, is it possible to tell what type of crime he has committed? To most people, distinguishing between a murderer, a swindler, or a second story man by studying his picture is impossible. G. R. Thornton, assistant instructor in the department of psychology, addressing a recent psychological convention, declared that the guesses of college students in attempting to identify crimes with photographs of criminals is only slightly better than chance expectations.

Mr. Thornton told the group of recently conducted investigations which suggest additional problems for further research. It is possible to tell what type of crime a man has committed by studying his picture, is it possible to increase that ability by training? Would there be individual differences in this type of ability?

Test 65 Students.
To obtain the preliminary data Mr. Thornton analyzed results from a series of tests with 65 students. Pictures of criminals who had committed several different crimes, were shown on the screen. Opposite each picture were listed four crimes. Each student was asked to underline the crime he believed the individual in the picture had committed. The instructor then determined the number of correct judgments, all possible prejudicial factors being eliminated so that the correct answers could be attributed only to the influence of the photographs.

Mr. Thornton's interest in this problem was chiefly in developing a method of testing the student's ability to judge crimes after ruling out all possible sources of error.
