ABOUT SECURITY

"Don't you realize that this is the next to the last column of the school year?" said a voice belonging to that old antennae standby. We glanced up from a preview scanning of the 1938 Cornhusker pages with their ultra-lifelike pictures and attractive typographical arrangements.

"So what?" we asked and hurriedly leafed thru to the beauty queen section.

"Don't you know that this is also the Sunday edition?"

"Yes."

"Well, then why don't you take advantage of both of your readers and get in a little sermon?"

We would have paid no attention to him but just then we were jolted by eager people clamoring for a glance at the new Cornhusker so we postponed a more thorough leafing of it until later.

"Well, pulpit pounder," we asked the cockroach. "What would be a good text?"

Rubbing his antennae against a forsaken hair pin lying on the battered desk, the cockroach replied:

Sermon.

"Graduation will soon be here and with it will come the awful inevitability of facing the future. Young men and women will go to work, or go somewhere and apply for it. They will probably be afraid of economic failure and take the very first thing that offers, even tho it may have a blind alley. I call to mind a newspaper clipping which my Aunt Emma Roach sent me. It quoted the president of Princeton, Harold M. Dodds, as saying: If you are to make anything of yourselves, you must be willing to face the risks of insecurity. The man who keeps his eyes fixed on security inevitably becomes enmeshed in the tentacles of the status quo. Unquote. I thought it very true and I agree with the president of Princeton. It is somewhat disconcerting to find young people accepting dullness as inevitable at the very time they should go around hitching wagons to stars. It is disconcerting to see them go around thinking that it is better to live a dull, safe life than to live dangerously. Too many people are concerned with the fetish of security."

"Just the same," we pointed out. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. If a person has to take a measley one hundred a week on graduation, he has to, that's all."

"How much?"

"So I meant fifteen a week," we said crossly, "it still goes. You gotta have something that brings in the potatoes, even if it is just checking the mistakes other people make in checking the mistakes of other people."

"Which just goes to prove my point," said the roach. "You are so swathed around with the philosophy of security that you are blind to everything else."

"Is that so? Just look at these ears. See how they stick out? They got that way from sitting at the door listening for opportunity to knock."

"Oh, well, I didn't mean just wishing for something better. I meant actually doing something with a goal in view."

"Very well," we agreed. "We shall keep your point well in mind but at the moment something more interesting occupies our time."

Grudgingly the cockroach departed and left us to the performance of a more interesting task—that of sleeping and wishing exams were over so we didn't have to worry about them.

CORN COBS INITIATE SIXTEEN THIS EVENING

New Group First to Enter Pep Club Under New Constitution.

Corn Cobs will hold their initiation this evening, the first to be held under the new reorganized charter in which the allotted 16 men will be initiated.

The new constitution points out that all fraternity and political alignments, formerly the basis of election, have been discarded and men are now picked upon a basis of the interest they have shown in the club, the amount and character of work done while serving as a worker, eligibility and work of other projects taken up by the club.
