

BY THE HAUNTRESS

Howard Kaplan sporting athletic underwear... Irene Seybold and Jack McKenzie in double gram session... Billie Fox doing house duties at the Silo early Saturday morning... two or three of the bigger men on the campus bearing the torch for Olive Speith... Ginny Anderson wearing Grant Thomas' pin "just for fun"... and in the meantime, Grant doing the rounds with Gerry Wallace... Mila Spader, Goddess of Agriculture, escorting high school sneakers about cow college... Sally Sellers again on Harry Epperson's list... Jigger Glass explaining some of the finer points of motor boating to Frannie Goodwin... and "Swan" Sinclair in a nearby booth telling Bill Diers all about the maid of honor gown she's copying from a New York model... Barbara Meyer about to take Jimmie de Wolf up on his backyard offer.

Up until this time of the year, we'd always thought that writing for the Rag was its own reward, but Friday night, Chuck Tanton and his business staff threw a dinner at the Lincoln hotel, which is worth every hour spent over typewriters throughout the semester (plus, of course, the extra bonuses of hush money that come our way).

Anyhow, when the party was well underway, someone brought out one of Sara Louise Meyer's columns, one of the "unmentionable set" and read it to those present, and believe it or not Slim turned a pale lobster hue, and did it very nicely, which goes to show that Sarie herself has picked up that delicate art of blushing since she left school.

And now for a few words about Mary Marnell, Theta pledge who swore she'd never take "another" pin. Her last annexation happened to be a Kappa Sig crescent which was eventually sent back to its owner at Stanford. Well, to get on with our story, Mary, who should be immune by this time, has again fallen heir to Greek hardware and this time it's George Svoboda's five-armed star she's wearing.

Speaking of pins, we noticed something the other day that might sound remarkable. Just to show how really difficult it is to keep up with everybody, we were still under the impression that Betty Cherny was pretty much occupied with Mark Owens, but that just couldn't be. Her sorority sisters swear that a Sigma Chi pin rests very close to her own Mortar Board pin. Figure it out for yourself.

UNIVERSITY BUDGET

535.40 which is $38,795.52 more than the actual and estimated income of $3,418,739.88 for the year. The 1937-38 budget was $3,443,542.09. This excess of anticipated expenditures over estimated income for next year is a result of savings this year and previous years so that funds are available and the budget will be balanced.

Only 53 percent of the income is derived from taxation monies, said funds are equal to half of the legislative appropriation or $1,868,220 of which $1,508,720 is apportioned for the operation and maintenance of the educational activities and $359,500 is the total of special appropriations for agricultural extension, hospital maintenance and other special activities.

Await Federal Grant.

Cash funds are estimated at $1,000,000 which includes an estimate of $375,000 from student fees and the balance is the estimated total for collections from departmental sales and revolving funds.

Federal funds are estimated at $545,378.63 and are contingent upon congressional appropriations for agricultural extension and research and co-operative studies for the agricultural experiment station.

Because the 1937 legislature appropriated the same amount of money for educational purposes as it had the previous biennium, faculty salaries during the coming year will remain unchanged except in a few instances where adjustments were necessary, due to increased work.

Stoke Returns.

The budget shows two former faculty members will return next year. Dr. Harold Stoke, associate professor of political science, who was on leave last year to do work for the TVA, will return to Lincoln, as will James A. Doyle, associate professor of law, who has been on a graduate fellowship at Harvard law school.

Two new faculty members for the physics department were approved Saturday. Lester L. Skoll was named assistant inspector in physics in place of W. W. Hansen. Mr. Skoll, who is now a graduate assistant at the University of Washington, received his M. A. degree from Nebraska in 1937. Dr. Theodore Jorgensen, jr., now assistant professor of physics at Clark university and holder of two degrees from the University of Nebraska, will return as assistant professor of physics.

James K. Ludwickson, for the past two years a graduate assistant in the department of mechanical engineering, was named instructor in that department. The appointment of the new staff member is due to the increased student registration in the heat power engineering division.

Re-lects Union Board.

William H. Ruten, now instructor of foundry practice at the Indianapolis, Ind., technical high school and holder of two degrees from Michigan, was named instructor in practical mechanics in place of A. E. Bunting, retired.

C. Bertrand Schultz, who has been head field man with the university museum for several years and more recently named instructor in geology, was also named assistant director of the museum. Dr. E. H. Barbour, who is ill, is director of the museum.

The board also approved appointments to the board of managers of the student union. They approved the reelection for two year terms of Prof. K. M. Arndt, Dr. W. H. Morton, and Miss Martha Park as faculty representatives. They confirmed the election by the student council of the following student members: Seniors (reelected) Robert Simmons, Morris Lipp; juniors, Ruth E. Green, Jean Morgan (both reelected), and Adna Dobson; sophomore, Helen E. Claybaugh. There is still a sophomore vacancy.

BACCALAUREATE

nationally known churchmen who last year crossed the United States on a national preaching mission sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches. He is the author of many poems and articles and is an associate editor of the Episcopal Pulpit Quarterly.

The commencement speaker this year is Dr. Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia university graduate school of journalism. Graduation exercises will be held on the following Monday, June 6, in the coliseum.
