

Dr. Hill Receives Title of Sterling Professor
 Dr. Clyde M. Hill of the educational faculty of Yale university, who was one of the headline speakers at the University of Nebraska's fifth educational conference last week, has been made a Sterling professor at Yale—one of the highest honors that can be awarded by that university. Announcement of the award was made at Yale's commencement exercises.

Hear for the Summer
 by Mary Anna Cockle

Way last summer Sara Louise Meyer compiled a list of suggestions on how to have fun on a quarter, two-bits, or twenty-five cents, depending upon the way you look at the filthy lucre. Just to go her one better, we thought up at least a dozen ways to while away the time on absolutely nought funds.

1. You might try just sitting in the lounge at the Student U. cooling off your heels and watching the people go by. People, you'll find, are awfully much fun to observe, especially if you play games with yourself like imagining how many fillings they have in their teeth, what town they came from, or where in h— they bought that hat. Twenty to one you'll be wrong every time.

2. Then there's that old standby of walking in the rain. The way things have been this year you can practically depend upon the atmosphere whenever you feel in a rainy mood. If no atmosphere appears, just wait until the street sprinkler makes his nightly trip down sorority row, and presto chango, with a little imagination, there you are, all set, rain and everything.

3. Then there's sleep. It's dirt cheap and sort of gives you a lift that other things never can, even Camels. And, if you feel really devilish some day, you might cut your seven o'clock and just gloat at your roommate.

With all those ideas to start with, you ought to have a whee of a time all by yourself, or if not all by yourself, at least with no money.

So while we're speaking of the things to do, we might tell you how very, very often a most attractive girl named Jan Dougherty and a Phi Psi from the Beta house who wanders over her way lots and lots nowadays just sit and talk for hours and hours. Or at least we always thought so until one night said Phi Psi flushed furiously when we saw him removing traces in a hall mirror.

This doesn't have much to do with summer school, but to mention the football men again (always our pride and joy), the evening paper one day last week surprised us so that we nearly drank two cups of coffee. There was a picture right on the front page of Bernie Masterson (remember him?) and his affianced. They took the final step on firecracker day. Wow!

And on another page of that same Lincoln daily, was a sly little note about Sam Francis and some gal named Billie Rich, who from all reports has completely taken over.

Some people tell us that Johnny Howell and Jane Barbour will be saying it with bells this fall, but who knows? Maybe his best friends, but they won't tell, so you will have to wait for that one.

Will see you all at the Turnpike this Friday when Little Jack Little, radio's cheerful little earful will preside.

Dr. Senning to Make Tour Through Canada
 Dr. John P. Senning, chairman of the department of political science, will leave about the middle of July for an extended trip thru the capitals of the Canadian provinces, where he will make a study of the systems of provincial government. Later he will study public and official opinion in the states of California, Oklahoma, Arizona and Texas, where the one house legislature is being considered.

PALM BEACH CRAVATS

SWEEP THE NECKWEAR FIELD!

• Yes... we're telling the world that GENUINE PALM BEACH CRAVATS are the whole show for Summer 1938. It doesn't seem possible that so much style, originality and smartness can be combined in a tie. But it has... and that's why they're again the first favorites of summertime. Cool... easy to tie... hard to muss... washable!
