Sod Breaking Marks Birth Of Love Hall

From Lincoln Journal.

Chancellor Boucher and Lela Curry, president of Carrie Belle Raymond hall, look on as Chancellor Emeritus Burnett and Don L. Love, former mayor of Lincoln whose $55,000 endowment fund started the campaign for enlargement of Raymond hall, dig in with their spades to signalize the commencement of construction work on the new Julia L. Love Memorial residence hall. The new Julia L. Love hall, to be erected as the right wing of the present dormitory, will house 96 university coeds when completed.

Officials Break Ground For Dorm Construction

New Girls' Residence Annex Accommodates 96 When Completed

A crowd of 250 gathered at 11 o'clock yesterday morning to witness the ground-breaking ceremonies for the new Julia Love Memorial Residence now in the process of construction just north of Carrie Belle Raymond hall.

Planned to accommodate ninety-six girls, the wing, one of two planned, will adjoin Raymond Hall facing Sixteenth street. The construction of the new dormitory unit was made possible by a $55,000 gift of Mr. D. L. Love and a PWA grant.

Chancellor C. S. Boucher presided at the ceremony as University officials, members of the student body, representatives of various organizations on the campus, interested townspeople and government representatives witnessed the proceedings.

Chancellor Boucher commented on the realization of a dream for better housing conditions, then introduced E. A. Burnett, chancellor emeritus, and Mr. Love, both of whom talked briefly.

"We Are Grateful."

"For many generations to come," the Chancellor said in his address, "the Julia L. Love Memorial Residence will make possible for many young women a richer life and a more fruitful experience during their years in the University than would otherwise have been possible. Today, we dedicate this site to the precious memory of Julia L. Love, and we express our deep and heart-felt gratitude to Mr. Love, who made possible the attainment of assistance from the federal government for the improvement of conditions of life and work among women students of the University."

Among the officials present were: Miss Clementine Newman, social director of Raymond Hall; Miss Hortense Allen, House Manager; Phyllis Chamberlain, president of Mortar Board; Mr. Walter Wilson, architect; Mr. Charles T. White, representing PWA; Dean H. H. Foster, law college; Lela Curry, president of Raymond Hall; and I. F. Seaton, operating superintendent.

Uni Students To Don 'Kid' Costumes

Elementary Teachers Hold Party in Ellen Smith Thursday Night

The annual party for students in the elementary education department of Teachers college will be held in the form of a "kid party" in Ellen Smith hall, Thursday night. As the party is for students majoring in this department only, they will come dressed as children from five to ten years old, decked out in hair bows and "Shirley Temple" style dresses.

The party is sponsored by the Teachers college in order that students may meet each other and come in direct contact with the faculty of their department. The tickets are 40c and may be purchased at the college.

Entertainment will consist of plays and games for elementary children. Such games as "Stop Beating Around the Mulberry Bush" and "London Bridge Is Falling Down" will be used.

Stunts will be given by organized groups, and will consist of "Mother Goose" plays and such: "Cinderella," "Red Riding Hood," "The Three Bears" and many more favorites of children will appear. Prizes will be awarded for the funniest, prettiest and most original costumes. The judges are Miss Wilson, Miss Davis and Miss Mason.

Heading all committees will be Betty Hillyer, president of Association of Child Education. Committees are as follows: Games and stunts, Betty Reese, Marjorie Moeller, Esther Lefler, Jane Allen and Evelyn Leavitt, chairman; food, Francis Van Anda, Betty Jane Hopewell, Betty O'Shea, Virginia Knowles, Jessie Funk and Barbara Manning; advertising, Marian Bowers and Betty Jane Dutch.

Election Returns

The day after election dawned with some doubt still remaining as to the elected candidates. The lead in all contested offices in the state from the gubernatorial race on down saw-sawed with nearly every batch of precinct returns.

Warner and Cochran were running close for the governorship, with Warner commanding a slight lead with 136 precincts reported.

The slot machine amendment went down to decisive defeat, meaning that no slot machines will be legalized in Nebraska. The short ballot amendment also appeared certain of defeat.

Governor Lehman was assured of re-election in New York state, triumphing over racket buster Thomas Dewey.

New Players' Cast Makes Public Debut

All-University Actors Give Program Tonight

Students who took part in the dramatic tryouts recently opened to the whole student body make their public debut at 7 o'clock this evening in the second Studio Theater program of the year. Of the large casts of the two plays, "Star Struck" and "Waiting for Lefty," all but two players are members of the general tryout group.

"Star Struck" supposedly portrays the "average day" in the life of Gordon Dare, a big box office drawing card. While he is at the studio, such common place things as a lion, a suicide-bent girl, a totem pole, a newspaper columnist and a threatened breach of promise suit arrive at his home to be efficiently handled by his long suffering wife.

Contrasted to the exaggerated comedy of the first play, "Waiting for Lefty" is based on the serious theme of a big strike. Action is not limited to the stage but extends over the entire auditorium.

Tragic Play.

With a series of tableaux showing the abject conditions in the homes of the workers, the play comes to a tragic ending when it is discovered that "Lefty" the union leader, has been murdered, supposedly at the order of company officials.

Grace Hill is the student director of "Star Struck; Robert Johnston, of "Waiting for Lefty."

Playing in the first play are: Lucille Soderholm as Kitty; Helen
