

SPORT NOTES

By Norman Harris

Practice Thursday night saw all traces of those who may have been "giggling boys" gone. First, second, and third string football men began realizing that Pittsburgh would be here in just two days.

The game that Nebraska was supposed to have waited for all year, the one game, perhaps second that Nebraska was scheduled to lose this year. Yes, the Big Six had been conceded when school started. We just couldn't lose it with the finest sophomore crop in many a year ready to do or die for dear old N. U.

But perhaps those sophomores were not just ready to "die" for dear old N. U. Perhaps they weren't tuned to the right key, and perhaps what is probably the case, they really weren't experienced enough to subdue the seniors whom they have opposed all this year.

Anyway, the Huskers come into the Pitt game with the most disastrous record ever. One win, one tie, and four black losses, and still, Husker fans keep faith, waiting for next year's all-letterman team, and the all-senior team the year after that. And why not?

As everyone who knows anything about football has already said, this year's record was one of the finest things that could have happened at Nebraska. A school can't go along year in and year out, winning constantly, scouring the land and winning its conference title every year. Notre Dame had a two year lull before they came back on top. Michigan was out of the national picture for almost five years before climbing back into the picture again. Southern California was toppled and is back on top again. Columbia isn't the "Rose Bowl" team it once was.

So Nebraska shouldn't be expected to be any different from these schools. Husker fans should be satisfied to know that the Scarlet has always been rated among the nation's top teams, and the fall they have taken this year is no indication that they will no longer be feared whenever they travel

Uncle "NEB" Says

"Funny thing, but when our football team is winning games we Nebraskans always say 'we won,' but when they hit a losing streak it's always 'they lost.' If you don't believe me, listen for it some time.

And say, it's only 17 days 'til the Military Ball, so better send your 'tux' to the EVANS and let them clean it, sew on loose buttons, and give it a general 'once over.'"

Huskers Face Nation's Best

Jones Boys Cling to Slim Hopes for Panther Upset

Odds Favor Pittsburgh By Wide Margin; Jones Depends on Sophs

Tomorrow afternoon, round about sundown, Nebraska may have pulled the season's most stunning upset; or it will have gone the way of almost every football team that shies up against Jock Sutherland's mighty senior eleven.

Of tomorrow afternoon, Sutherland will send his charges onto the field, primed to knock whatever chance Nebraskans have of calling 1938 a successful football year, cockeyed.

Ten seniors will man the Panther ship, along with the junior, who rates as good as an yof the other ten. Huskers will rely on sophomore signal calling, sophomore line play, sophomore punting and sophomore punting.

Experience should tell. Betting odds favor Pitt by 6 to 10 to 1. Nebraska's only chance is to play over its limit for 60 full minutes. Perfect team play may aid in pulling an upset. Both possibilities are well nigh improbable.

Remember Last Year. But there's always that chance for an upset, and to that chance 34,000 Husker fans will cling tomorrow. Last year, Minnesota went down before an inspired Cornhusker array.

Last year's Pitt game, played before some 71,000 fans in Panther hollow saw Jack Dodd whip from nowhere to take a criss-cross from Harris Andrews and scamper 60 yards on a punt return for a Husker score. The Scarlet hung tenaciously to a slim seven point lead until the final quarter when Pitt's steamrolling, granite crushing, power threw back the Husker forward wall to punch two touchdowns across the goal line.

Pitt's Shifty Backs. Last year, Charlie Brock and away to play or whenever an opponent comes here.

All denunciations of Biff Jones have been cast aside without much trouble, purely because those who handle the reins and fortunes of this University's athletics realize there aren't many coaches better than Biff; that the reason for such a dismal season is purely inexperience and sophomoricity.

The $6.00 which university students spent on activity tickets this year was no waste, but rather a good investment. The games at home has been thrillers, and even though Nebraska hasn't won a home game, they've played the kind of ball that entertains a crowd.

If we beat Pitt, tomorrow, all will be peaceful and the wolves will stop their howling, which has been of no influence anyway. They may as well have saved their breaths.

Sports Night Attracts 100

Women Participate in Variety of Gym Games

Approximately 100 girls attended the first intramural sports night held last night in Grant Memorial from 7 to 8 o'clock under the auspices of the W.A.A. organization. Nebraska ball, ping pong, badminton, deck tennis, golf driving, and golf putting were played.

This sports hour is only a part of the extensive program outlined by W.A.A. Other sports being planned are swimming, roller skating and bowling. During the course of the year several of these nights have been planned. The next one is set for December 8.

W.A.A. has taken charge of sport activities such as this for several years. It attempts to acquaint the freshmen girls and to interest more girls in activities. All girls are invited to attend.

Bonnie Burn, president of W.A.A., was in charge, and Pauline Bowen, vice-president, was general chairman. Irene Elen conducted the ping-pong; Helen Kovanda had charge of badminton; Tess Casady was in charge of Nebraska ball; Dorothy Swoboda and Mary Cline were co-chairmen of golf; Katherine Kellison sponsored basket shooting. Miss Loize Montgomery is the intramural sponsor for W.A.A.

Popcorn balls were served to the girls after the games. Majorie Schick was in charge.

Sutherland Arrays Gridiron's Finest Squad Against N.U. Tomorrow

Bill Callihan backed up Nebraska's line with spirit and fire that amazed one of the largest crowds of the season. Elmer Dohrmann and Fred Shirey combined to form the most formidable tackle and end defense the Panthers had worked against all year; and their play almost won that game.

Dodd, Brock, and Callihan will be playing Saturday, but Dohrmann and Shirey will not. George Seeman and Bob Mills will be in their places. Seeman and Mills played their best game of the season against Kansas last Saturday, and a little improvement over that game should find them playing nearly up to Dohrmann-Shirey style.

Pitt's ends, Daddio and Hoffman; backs Cassiano, Stebbins, and Goldman, three of the hardest hitting, shiftest running backs in the country will be the big troubles. Chickerno at blocking position is slated to raise havoc with Cornhusker defenders.

Stadium Jammed

Pitt, after its 20 to 10 defeat at the hands of Carnegie Tech last Saturday will be out for blood. There's no telling just how much of a score they may run up if they once start rolling. Then again, there's no telling how drab their play may appear once a Husker defense stops a few power plays.

The Huskers have a chance, a slim one. The Panthers should win badly. But no matter what the outcome, the 34,000 who will occupy seats in Memorial stadium tomorrow will see the best home game of the season, if only because they are seeing another great Pitt team in action. Here's hoping they get their money's worth because of a Nebraska upset.

Can You Steer A Hoop? Better Learn, Brother

A word of encouragement to the men who must dance with hoop skirts—they're really not so bad as they seem, for they bend out of the way very conveniently and don't poke out in back.

These petticoats that have a way of showing underneath black velvet and black taffeta formal are all the rage. Rudge's are showing a black velvet formal, gay nineties style, that may be worn with or without the lace petticoat and hoops. A nosegay decorates the low neck bodice of the black taffeta model, that also has a white lace edged petticoat. Mulberry and aqua taffeta formals in the same style are definitely the most old fashioned type with lacking down the front of the bodice, very full skirts and low neck in front and high in back.

Ice blue quilted satin, high waisted, puff sleeves, with a cameo at the neckline is a model copied from the picture in Life's fashion issue recently. Old rose moire two-tone taffeta with a gathered bodice and the good old hoop skirt... black heavy satin with gathered bodice and the sweetheart neckline are two other gay nineties fashions.

To keep you warm, you may wear a conventional black velvet full-length fitted coat with the innovation of white fur sleeved and a white fur muff. New this year is the black wool tweed princess style coat with high pointed sleeves. Or you may prefer a red tweed cape, a brocaded black short fitted jacket.

Barb Volleyball Begins Tuesday

Eighteen Teams In Intramural Meet

Play in the Barb volleyball league is scheduled to begin Tuesday, according to the Barb Union bulletin for Nov. 8.

Up to date, 18 teams had filed with Harold Petz, director of intramurals. Probable plans are that four leagues will be formed of all the teams entering; with entrants playing off league games, then going into final rounds to determine the winner of the entire tourney.

Any groups of Barbs desiring to enter a team must submit the names of their players to the intramural office. The addresses and phone numbers of the captain or president and the director of the group must also be submitted to the office.

After the volleyball tournament, Barb leaders expect to get a basketball tournament under way, conducted along the same lines as the volleyball meet.

Dr. D. A. Worcester of the department of educational psychology any measurements took some of his classes on an inspection tour of state institutions the past week. Dr. Warren Baller of the same department gave several educational and psychological tests to various groups from over the state recently as a part of the university's testing service program.

As I See It

By June Bierbower

Bo McMillan's India Hoosiers, in the midst of a very dismal season, have had about as much hard luck as any team we can call to mind. First of all, Joe Szabo, a cinch for one guard position, fractured an elbow, and was out for the season.

Harry Brooks, the Hoosiers' best sophomore ball carrying prospect, didn't return to school. Two other sophomores passed up football for studies and other sports. Cobb Lewis and Joe Tofil, two Lincoln Journal fine sophomore backs were injured in the Ohio State game and haven't played since then. Tim Bringle, Joe Nicholson, Frank Petrick, Archie Harris, and Russ Sloss have all been out of at least one game with injuries, while Don Wardine is the latest casualty, and will miss the Iowa U. game Saturday.

Guard Frank Mikan, who started against the Huskers, has quit school. Even the Marshall Goldberg may not play tomorrow, Sutherland won't be lacking backs. In the first place, it's usually an unknown who stars for an against Nebraska—witness Mike Sebastian's four touchdowns in 1934, and Arnold Greene's two in 1936. Mad Marshall's substitute, Ben Kish, is a 205 pounder who has seen quite a bit of service during the past two years. Then there is another substitute back, Larry Peace, lying in wait, who might prove to be the Panthers' spark. Still another one, Emil Naric, a 195 pounder, has starred as a reserve in several games.

We haven't even mentioned Dick Cassiano, Hal Stebbins or Johnny Chickerno, best Husker followers already know too much about them. Call it the Panthers after Goldberg left the Husker-Pitt game last year, and Stebbins and Chickerno
