'LADIES BOOK' RULES

The hostess was responsible for the complete comfort of all the guests. She always kept eau de cologne, hartshorn, and salts in the ladies' room for cases of sudden faintness, and in the gentlemen's room a clothes brush and boot-jack.

The customary refreshments for a large party are ice cream, lemonade and cake. One word of warning to all hostesses, you can never know, when you place wine or brandy before your guests, whom you may be tempting to utter ruin. Better, far, to have a reputation as strict than to have the sin upon your soul of having put poison before those who partook of your hospitality.

Guests were warned against making any display of affection for even the dearest of friends. Kissing in public was considered bad taste. While dining, gloves and mittens worn at the table had just gone out of style. The proper material for a dress was silk or thin material over silk trimmed with lace, flowers or ribbon.

"Detestable" Jewelry. "The Ladies Book of Etiquette" advised, "Eat your soup quietly. To make any noise in eating is simply disgusting. The knife is to cut your food with, and must never be used while eating. To munch or smack the lips are vulgar faults, as are pouring coffee and tea into your saucer."

The talented young musician never should make unnecessary movements at the piano such as: swinging the body to and fro, moving the head, and rolling the eyes. Wearing any jewelry in the street was "detestable." While on the street a well-mannered girl never stopped to speak to a gentleman. She never dragged her skirts in the mud or raised them above the tops of her high-button shoes.

"Ignore Him." The traveling woman remembered a cello bag in which she carried crackers and sandwiches for long trips. "If you are so unfortunate while traveling on a boat to suffer from sea-sickness, never leave home without a straw-covered bottle of brandy, and another of camphor, in your carpet bag. If a gentleman on deck sits near you and seems disposed to be impertinent, or obtrusive in his attentions or conversation, lower your veil and turn from him, either looking from the window or reading."

For the first six months of 1938, gifts to educational institutions declined $58,968,188 from the total of a similar period of last year.

Debaters Face Drake Tonite

Forensic Season Opens On "Funds" Question

Competing in their first intercollegiate debate of the season, Nebraska debaters will face representatives of Drake university tonight in Andrews at 7:30 o'clock. The question will be, Resolved: "that the United States should cease to use public funds (including credit) for the purpose of stimulating business." This topic is the national collegiate debate question for the year, as selected by Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic fraternity.

Drake's feminine affirmative speakers, Jane Gibson and Ruth Frisby, will be opposed by Sam Kirshenbaum and Harold Turkel. This argument will be held in room 126.

Speaking for the affirmative for Nebraska, Hilton Gustafson and Donald Nemetz, will have as their opponents, John Simmons and William Wisdom. This debate, also at the same time, will be held in room 101.

All Veterans

Members of the Nebraska group have all had training in debate work. Nemetz and Gustafson were members of the squad last season and both are members of Delta Sigma Rho, honor debate society. Nemetz was on the championship district debate team during his high school career at Blair. Turkel debated at Lincoln high school and won the Faulkner cup for oratorical ability as well as being a member of the interclass championship team. He won the long debate trophy for freshmen last year. Kirshenbaum was also a champion debater in high school and was winner of the long debate trophy awarded at the University two years ago.

Drake debaters have had considerable experience in forensics and are making an extensive tour to the western coast. During this time they will participate in debates with fourteen colleges and universities and will give exhibitions before several high school audiences.

Debates will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock and students and the general public are invited to attend without charge.

Arabs, Walt Disney Make Requests of J. P. Guilford

University Psychologist Grants Unusual Favors

Three unusual requests from different parts of the world have come to Dr. J. P. Guilford, professor of psychology. One letter from the University of Iraq in Arabia asked permission to translate his new textbook on psychology into Arabic. No similar book in English has been translated into this language since a text published back in 1921.

Another letter from Hollywood, where the Walt Disney studios are located, asked Dr. Guilford to furnish film technicians with all his information on the psychological effects of color. Because of the University psychologist's extensive research in the field of color, he has been invited to visit the color research laboratory of the Disney studio during the coming summer. Dr. Guilford has already agreed to teach psychology at the University of Southern California during the summer session of 1939.

From New York he has been mailed a contract from one of the large publishing houses to edit a textbook on fields of psychology, a publication which is to be a

Bengtson Speaks At Vesper Hour

Professor Discusses Latin-American People

"We should be humble in our attitude toward our Latin-American neighbors," said Dr. Nels Bengtson of the geography department, when he spoke at Vespers last night in Ellen Smith. In support of his statement he told of the high sense of morals of the people down beyond the Rio Grande.

"They are faithful and regular in their relationships, and the fact that they wear little or no clothing is not a sign of immorality," he declared.

Mary Bullock presented the devotional meditation for Thanksgiving meeting, with the Vesper choir singing "Come Ye Thankful People, Come," by Elvey.
