Cornell Library Creates Haven For Browsers

ITHACA, N. Y.—Unlike other libraries on the campus, the new "browsing" library at Cornell University has been earmarked "for recreation only."

The home-like appearance of a blazing fire and comfortable chairs will replace the austere scholastic atmosphere of the reference library, and students will be asked to check their classroom books and notebooks before entering.

The tested classical favorites and the contemporary popular books are expected to appeal to both the cultural and recreational interests of the patrons.
