

SPORT NOTES

By Norman Harris

Reading Bernie Kooser's column, "loopin'" in the Iowa State Daily student, we found this anecdote, which is too good to keep out of the "Rag." We're passing it on and thanking Kooser for the chance to inject a little spirit into this column.

Talking of Chuck Heileman and Ed Bock, Cyclone stars who played in the East-West game, Kooser writes:

"Chuck tells one of the best of the late football stories of the season:

"Heikkenen, of Michigan, came out to the game as an All American, and rated one of the stars of the Eastern squad. In the game on New Year's day he was shoved around quite a bit by a lad by the name of Truzckowski.

"About the third quarter, Mr. T. said, as he helped the by now disgruntled Heikkenen, off the ground, "Your name is Heikkenen, isn't it?"

"A few plays later and Mr. T. said, "...and you are an All American, aren't you?"

Only a grunt from Mr. H.

"Then, after a particularly savage smash had put Heikkenen down again, a look of satisfaction passed over Truzckowski's countenance, a look that comes only to those who have found the answer to something that has long puzzled them.

"Heikkenen!"

"Heikkenen"—more persistent this time.

Still no answer.

"Heikkenen, know why I wasn't picked All American?"

"Cause I ain't a citizen!"

The "Our team is red hot" that fans heard at the basketball game Saturday has a story connected with it.

When the Corn Cobs and Tassels migrated to Lawrence last Nov. 5 for the football game with K.U., Nebraska took an early lead. During the third quarter, when the Jayhawks began a goalward march, and finally pushed the ball across for their touchdown, the K. U. rooters began the chant, "Our team is red hot!"

When Anderson kicked his filed goal with five minutes to go, the chant changed hands... and when K.U. basketballers took the floor Saturday night... Cobs and Tassels weren't forgetful... and immediately reminded Kansas that their team was "red hot"... and it was!

Iowa State's performance at the Midwest A.A.U. tourney in Omaha Saturday stamps the Cyclones mermen as probable favorites to cop the Big Six meet this spring for the second straight year, and eighth time in 11 years. Nebraska, conference champion during the other three years, made a poor showing, and fell far behind the Cyclone swimmers.

As I See It by June Bierbower

If the beginning of the basketball season is to be taken as any basis on which to judge, it looks as though this school year isn't one for champions. We all remember what team didn't repeat as football champs, and now it looks as though Phog Allen's Kansas team is just about through before the season starts. It took wallpings from both Oklahoma and Nebraska, and had one terrible time eking out a four point victory over Kansas State.

In their Saturday night appearance here it didn't look as aggressive nor as talented as the other Allen teams we have seen.

Nebraska's games this week against Kansas State and Missouri, especially the latter, will throw more light on the Husker dark horses, while the Kansas-Missouri tilt Wednesday night should be a real one. Missouri should win, say the forecasters, but there's a little matter of Kansas-Tiger rivalry which may provide some unexpected doings.

Back to the Huskers, if Don Fitz and Al Randall continue to gobble rebounds as they did against Kansas, the rest of the league will have to dig out from under. Fitz looked like Bob Parsons in his palmy days.

More from the Husker-K.U. game: Al Werner, who played brilliantly for the Huskers Saturday night, is the second Kansan to plague the Jayhawks this year. Al captained the Huskers to victory, while a fellow named Bill Anderson played quite a bit of football at Lawrence in the final five minutes last fall. The floor was "lousy" with politicians. N.U.'s team includes senior class President Kovanda, and junior class leader Grant Thomas. Don Ebling, Ray's little brother, was

N.U.'s Hope For Circuit Crown Rises

Two Defeats in as Many Starts Make Kansans Underdogs in Fracas

Riding on the victory crest after their decisive victory over Kansas Saturday night, the Huskers travel to Manhattan tonight to take on Kansas State.

W.H. BROWNE Lincoln Journal.

K-State has had two defeats in as many starts in conference competition, losing to Iowa State, 47 to 36, and to Kansas, 33 to 29. The Aggies look to Homer Wesche, all conference center last season, for their scoring threat but as yet have developed no effective defense against a high scoring team such as Nebraska showed itself to be against Kansas.

In the Kansas game Nebraska set itself up as an important figure in the conference race along with Missouri and Iowa State. Oklahoma who started out with a surprise win over Kansas ran into difficulty when it dropped a close game to Missouri.

Coach W. H. Browne took 12 men to Manhattan. His starting lineup will be the same that started against the Jayhawks: Grant Thomas and Bill Kovanda, forwards; Al Randall, center, and Don Fitz and Alton Werner, guards. In addition he took Frank Tallman, Jack Jackson, Lloyd Grimm, Irvin Yaffe, Bob Elliott, Harry Pitcaithley, and Bob Therien.

sophomore class president at K.U. last year. . . . Incidentally, Kovanda, who always has been the most aggressive player on the Husker team, looked super-aggressive Saturday night, and some of those running shots of his were beauties. . . . the Huskers sank two fairly long ones, with Al Werner and Grant Thomas pitching them in, but there weren't any Bob Parsons Specials in the game.

Backwash: California makes only three football trips next fall, playing Oregon State at Portland, U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles, and Stanford at Palo Alto. . . . Mary Franklin, Vanderbilt's captain this year, will enter Yale's divinity school. . . . Bill Matheny of North Carolina State wants to be a detective. . . . Hal Stebbins of Pitt wants to be a crooner, but says he'll probably wind up as a salesman. . . . Lloyd the Wild Hoss Cardwell justified his all-star pro selection with that 40 yard run after taking a short pass from Sammy Baugh. . . . Cardy probably streaked so fast he was across the goal line before New York's Giants knew he had caught the pass. . . . well, just about that fast.

Gymnasts Try For Varsity Team

Proffitt Takes Lead Honors; Seidel Second

Preliminary tryouts for the varsity gymnastics team were held Friday, Saturday, and Monday afternoons in the Coliseum. Roy Proffitt, out for three weeks with injuries, was back in suit and copped first place in three out of five events and placed second in another. He was closely followed by Don Seidel who placed in all but one event.

Proffitt won the most points on the parallel bars with Jake Geier, Gay Cadwell, and Don Seidel closely pressing him. On the flying rings Seidel proved superior with Proffitt, second and Geier, third. Cadwell took the side horse event which is his specialty, with Geier second. Proffitt also won most points on the horizontal bar, nosing out Stan Southwick by a half point. Seidel was third, and Cadwell fourth. In tumbling Proffitt again was superior winning over Seidel by a few points.

More try outs will be held at regular intervals until the first meet, and at any time one member may challenge any other to rise on the ladder in each event.
