'Redness' of Collegian Pales At Perusal of Nelson Survey

College Student Inclines Toward Conservatism

Are college students red? Is the line of talk which ascribes to education the ability to make radicals out of conservatives logical.

"Emphatically no—on both the counts," replies Dr. Erland Nelson in a survey of eighteen different institutions of higher learning.

The schools cooperating in the study represent church-supported institutions and state universities in the middle west and the south. The investigation indicated beyond all doubt that students in these schools today are definitely conservative in their opinions.

Expressions of Opinion.

In his report, Dr. Nelson classified "conservative attitudes" as those which tend to retain the status quo. "Liberal attitudes" were those welcoming moderate changes, while the so-called "radical attitudes" were placed at the opposite end from the conservative group.

The questionnaire, prepared by Dr. Nelson and Dr. Worcester of the department of educational psychology and measurements, asked the student to express his attitude on such issues as free trade, science and religion, race toleration, capitalism, socialism,

Union Plans Super Matinee Hop to Revive Exam-Weary Students

Attention all jitterbugs! Something new in the way of matinee dances will be presented Saturday—a super dance with the music of Ken Nelson's band and several spotlight features, the nature of which has not been disclosed. This is being presented, according to Mrs. Yinger whose idea it was, to relieve the minds of those students who have discovered that exams are here. It will be given in the Union ballroom, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Landis Talks At Choral Vespers

Hastings College Coed to Discuss Westminster

All the noted musicians who are organists of English cathedrals are also celebrated performers of Bach organ music. In view of this fact, the Cathedral Choir will sing one of the most beloved of Bach motets, "Sing Ye to the Lord," Houghton Furr, university junior, will be seated at the organ, and will play a group of German chorales.

Hardin Claims Survivor of Custer's Massacre

A dead horse is the center of a dispute between newspapers of Hardin, Montana who demand its return to Hardin and Dr. H. H. Lane, curator of the University of Kansas museum, who refuses to give him up.

Not only is the horse dead, but stuffed, mounted and cast away into storage in a K.U. warehouse. But Comanche is not an ordinary horse by any means, for he was the private mount of Capt. Miles Keough of Custer's troop and the sole survivor of Custer's Massacre.

Stood in Glass Case.

For many years Comanche stood in a great glass case just inside the main door of the Dyche (K.U.) museum, an object of admiration and comment. Then museum officials were forced to vacate the Dyche museum and Comanche was tossed into a corrugated iron warehouse, with other articles of jettison, locked up and forgotten.

Building Report Repeats Urgency For New Library

Statement on Condition of Library Hall

University of Nebraska.

1. Footings (ground construction) adequate.

2. Walls of ample thickness and in good condition.

3. Not fireproof.

4. Precipitable sag in main floor. Probably infested with termites.

5. Second floor—wood floor beams and joists supported on brick walls and columns (columns of doubtful composition and strength); FLOOR BEAMS ARE BADLY SAGGED; ENTIRELY POSSIBLE FLOOR SYSTEM IS INFESTED WITH TERMITES.

6. Roof, roof trusses, purlins, rafters and sheathing of wood throughout; slate covered.

7. ROOF SYSTEM SAGGED AND TWISTED OUT OF SHAPE.

8. Fireproof except for floor covering and windows.

9. Main floor and second floor rest on 15 inch I-beams supported by six cast iron columns and in part by the vault walls (brick).

10. I-beams support a 10 inch tile over which is 6 inch slab of concrete; rough floor of pine 1 inch thick; finish floor nailed to strips in rough floor.

CRITICISMS.

1. Cast iron columns—No one knows their exact supporting strength, and calculations heretofore made indicate that they are now loaded to the limit.

2. The concrete slab—under the floor—concrete mixed by hand 30 years ago does not compare favorably with present day concrete. The slab carries no reinforcing and is of such poor quality that it can readily be removed with a trench digger's pick. Pieces of the concrete are friable in the hands.

3. Data compiled by O. A. Ellis, Construction Engineer.

Engineer O. A. Ellis Describes Decay of University Structure

By Marjorie Churchill.

"Not fireproof"—"perceptible sag in floors"—"walls in good condition"—"columns loaded to the limit!"

Ominous words, most of them—yet together they paint an accurate picture of the condition of a building in which approximately 500,000 pounds of books must be stored.

Complete data on the condition of the university library has been compiled by O. A. Ellis, university construction engineer, who has made checkups from time to time and two years ago made a complete examination of the building. Conditions quoted in the report are conditions as they exist today, the one improvement made during the two years being the construction last summer of a new composition board ceiling in the reserve reading room.

"Tremendous weight," "over-crowding," "inadequate"—all the old epithets applied to Library hall—become more apparently applicable upon examination to the compiled facts, which show conclusively evidence of conditions which must be remedied, and which yearly become more acute.

Loaded to Limit.

Two major factors stand out clearly in an examination of the information compiled. The fact that the columns in the north wing are now loaded to the limit and the lack of a fireproof structure in the south wing. The 1200 new books which come into the library yearly could no longer, with safety be added to the weight which the columns of the north wing are carrying, even were space on the shelves available.

Nebraska law forbids the carrying of insurance on state owned property. Hence, the necessity of protecting some $250,000 worth of books from destruction by fire is rendered absolute. Yet this investment, $350,000 of state money, is "protected" in a structure which, by written statement of the university construction engineer, is admittedly only partly fireproof.

Wooden beams and joists supporting the floors, a roof which, together with its supports, is wood throat, render the fire hazard in the south wing tremendous.

Perhaps Termites.

Two years ago termite infestation made necessary the rebuilding of the entire basement floor. Today badly sagging floors and floor beams are reported by the engineer, who believes it "entirely possible that the floor system is infested with termites."

Discard of the building for university use has never been advocated. The belief is that it might be used for other purposes is supported by the facts given in the report. The walls are "of ample thickness and in good condition."

The ground floor, built two years ago is of good construction. The columns which now support their tremendous load of books could easily bear the weight of classrooms were the building to be devoted to that purpose.

The concrete slab under the floor of the north wing is shown by the report to be noticeably defective. Altho bookshelves are not supported by the floor alone but rest upon beams which in turn are supported by the columns, the defect is a real one, inasmuch as the report describes the concrete slab as noticeably inferior, states that it can be readily removed with a trench digger's pick, and that pieces of it are friable in the hands.

A "roof system badly sagged and twisted out of shape," "columns of doubtful composition and strength" in the south wing are but a part of the compiled facts which speak for themselves, which argue eloquently for the primary need on the Nebraska campus—a new library building.

Kosmet Calls For Entries

Klub Seeks Spring Show Manuscripts by Jan. 31

Kosmet Klub is still calling for suitable manuscripts for its 1939 spring show, according to Don Moss, Klub president. A tentative deadline of Jan. 31 has been set for filing entries in the competition, which carries $50 in prizes, but persons expecting to submit manuscripts are asked to give their names to the Klub now.

Any person connected with the university in any capacity is eligible to enter the competition. An award of $40 will be made to the writer of the winning manuscript while a $10 prize will go to the author of the entry named second best. All manuscripts receiving prizes will become the property of the Klub.

Lyric Contest.

A song-writing contest is also being held in connection with the show and an award of $10 will be given for the best melody selected for use in the production. Lyrics need not be written until after the plot of the show has been ascertained.

Manuscripts will be judged on a basis of originality, cleverness of action and lines, ease and adaptability of staging to the limited facilities of the Temple theater. According to traditions, the show will be of musical comedy type with an all-male cast portraying feminine as well as masculine characters. Scripts should be in two or three acts with a running time of about two hours and a half.

Kansas U., Montana Village Wage War Over Dead Horse

Then museum officials were forced to vacate the Dyche museum and Comanche was tossed into a corrugated iron warehouse, with other articles of jettison, locked up and forgotten.

Only Survivor.

Comanche was found lying wounded at the site of Custer's battle, the lone survivor. He was restored to health by officers at Fort Leavenworth where he spent his declining years. Because they did not feel that they could spend the necessary $200 taxidermist's fee required to preserve him after his death, the officers gave him to the University of Kansas.

Even while in dead storage, Comanche was not completely forgotten, several request for pictures being received. On one occasion a letter came from an Irish lad asking for "just one hair" from Comanche's tail.
