Oklahoma's Boy Scouts gave the Huskers their third conference defeat of the season at Norman January 28 56 to 39.

Nebraska broke into an early 11 to 7 lead, but the Sooners took over and led at the half 23 to 17. Tallman sparked Nebraska into an early second half rally, but the superior floor play of the hosts kept pace with the Huskers. With six minutes to play, the Boy Scouts

Fussy coeds, paper tearers make crib waiters groan

Girls are harder to please than men

Then men in white (Corn Crib waiters) have quick pick-up but some let down by their student following. They complain when "fussy" coeds can't decide or change their minds on orders or when fellows with lots of time and nothing to do sit in booths without buying a coke.

If anyone is seized with a paper tearing mood, they advise him to avoid the grill with its napkins and many targets.

"Reed," head man of the business, thinks his work behind the bar is okay. But he believes that girls are harder to please than the fellows and sometimes put on the "superior than you" attitude. When blowing paper wrappers off straws became too popular, waiters held a conference and now they hold the containers until the straws are extracted.

One Hour—130 Cokes. In the beginning a number code was used by the "men in white" to make calling orders snappier and more efficient, but waiters came and went too fast and the new men had trouble understanding the code. Now a cherry coke is no longer number 533 and a plain coke isn't 33.

A top flight waiter can be turned out in about fifteen days having the balance to carry four glasses full up and dripping in one hand. Shifting feet and quick dodging are necessary during rush hours when people whip to and fro with no worry about a head-on collision.

Wednesday between four and five is the busiest time. Then 130 cokes are made in one hour, with chocolate and cherry reigning as favorites of drinks and ham salad for sandwiches. To ask for hamburgers in the morning and ham and eggs in the afternoon is a favorite trick of the prize grill patrons. The funniest order on record is for a butterscotch Dr. Pepper while a close second is a coca-cola malted milk.

stretched their lead to 13 points to put the game on ice.

Bill Kovanda, senior forward paced the Husker scorers with four field goals, while Mesch and Corbin tallied 16 points apiece to garner scoring honors.
