

As I See It by June Bierbower

James Masker, dean of Big Ten officials, who has been in the officiating business for 35 years, said in the Chicago Tribune that the incident he remembers above all occurred in the 1910 Nebraska-Kansas game at Lawrence.

The teams were playing on McCook field, which, along with its other features, had a fence behind the goal posts and a stream bordered by jagged rocks behind that. No ground rules had been made, however.

Owen Frank, great Husker back, scored a touchdown to put the Huskers ahead 6-0 at the end of the half. In the second half Kansas kicked off and the ball bounced over safety man Frank's head and over the fence. Frank started to go over the fence, but Masker stopped him, fearing the Husker would injure himself on the rocks between him and the stream.

Meanwhile Tod Woodbury of Kansas had cut through a gate in the fence, crossed a footbridge over the stream and recovered the ball. He brought it back, and touched it down behind the goal line, claiming a score, but Masker disallowed it. Kansas squawked for some time afterward, but A. A. Stagg and Walter Camp approved his decision.

Dale Hanson, Gopher wrestler who put an end to Jim Knight's winning streak Monday night, is champion jack-pot winner on the Minnesota wrestling team.

Coach Dave Bartelma evolved the idea of a jack-pot for each wrestling meet, having all the eight first team men put in 10 cents. He adds 80 cents for a total of $1.60 which is at stake every time the Gophers grapple.

The men who win by decisions get 10 cents, those who win by falls get 15 cents, and the player getting the quickest fall wins the rest of the money. Bartelma gets the jack-pot if there are no falls scored by Minnesota men—that happened in the Iowa State meet.

Hanson the only player who has won twice, did so against Kansas State and Iowa State Teachers. In those meets he scored the lone fall, disposing of Farland Fansher of Kansas State in 2:52, and pinning Hummell of the Teachers in 1:52. Monday night, however, he had to be content with his dime. Remainder of the split was: Ten cents to Pete Culbertson, John Matlon, Jack Motron, Al Janesko, and a cool $1.10 to Bill Kusisto who pinned George Seeman.

Wayne Yarcho, who was a Husker freshman three years ago, finished third in the 1,000 yard run in last Saturday's Illinois Relays. Yarcho is in his second year of competition at Illinois U. Best looking sophomore pitcher on the Kansas U. baseball team is John Burge, football end. Frank Bukaty, a back during the football season, may get be used as a pitcher. Leading contenders for Ferrel Anderson's old catching position are Ed Hall and Eldreth Cadwalader, two other backs. All four footballers played Ban Johnson baseball last summer. Les Kappelman, of University Daily Kansan and basketball fame, will be returning as the Jayhawks, regular shortstop.

Wesche Nicholas hold lead in Big Six scoring

Homer Wesche, sharpshooting Kansas State center, retained his position at the head of the Big Six scoring by virtue of his 10 points against Missouri, Gordon Nicholas, Iowa State pivot man, pulled into second place by hitting the hoop for 15 points as the Cyclones lost to Kansas.

K-State tonight's host to Demons; Kansas U threatens Sooner lead

BIG SIX STANDINGS.

Table with 5 columns: Team, W, L, Pct, Pts, Opp. Lists Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa State, Nebraska, Kas. State.

Friday night Nebraska entertains a skyscraping basketball quintet from DePaul university of Chicago.

The Blue Demons come to Nebraska after playing four teams on the midwestern jaunt. Up to date they have won two and dropped one of the scheduled games with one left to go. Wichita handed the Demons their only defeat, 35 to 32, Monday night, while the Windy City cagers took Creighton into camp 39 to 31 and South Dakota 37 to 35. Tonight Kansas State plays host to the invaders from Chicago.

Missouri, Kansas take wins.

Missouri and Kansas climbed to within one game of the league leading Sooners after their Monday night wins, while Iowa State was relegated to fourth place in the conference.

Oklahoma faces a stiff proposition from now on out, as the Sooners meet Kansas, Nebraska and Kansas State in succession away from home. The Sooners have not been successful away from home in previous battles, losing to both Missouri and Iowa State.

Kansas offers the only serious threat to the Sooners, as a win by the Jayhawkers Saturday night would knock the Sooners from their perch, and put Phog Allen's defending champs in a position to repeat last year's feat.

Bullock to speak on monopoly

"The Perennial Problem of Monopoly" is the subject of the paper which T. T. Bullock, instructor in economics will read before the February meeting of Economica tonight.

With the professors of the Bizad college, the department of economics and the department of rural economics at the agricultural college attending, discussion and criticism of the views presented in the paper will follow.

With a few indications of the differences in the competitive situation in various industries, Bullock plans to outline for the economics club what some of the proposed solutions of the monopoly problem have been, as well as to suggest the reasons for the lax enforcement of our anti-trust laws.
