Registration records show first day lag

A. R. Congdon urges students to complete schedules early in week

At the close of the lightest first day registration in many semesters, A. R. Congdon, chairman of the assignment committee, urges all students to enroll during the early part of the week, in order to avoid confusion near the end of registration, Saturday at noon.

All sections are still open, but students who plan to take a particular section of any subject should register today, as many of them will be by tomorrow noon.

Two-fifths afternoon hours.

As in previous semesters, students are required to have at least two-fifths of their hours in the afternoon or on Saturday. Those who are unable to comply with this rule due to employment or other substantial reasons must secure the written approval of the chairman of the assignment committee before their registration will be accepted at the dean's office.

All students registered for military science 1 are advised to register for a company on either Tuesday or Thursday morning.

Those who are registered for military science 3 and have vacant hours either Monday, Wednesday, or Friday morning should register for a company on one of those mornings.

Two substitute registrations

No changes or substitute registrations are permissible if previous registration has been accepted by the office of the dean. Those who wish to make changes in their schedules must make them following September 22 of next semester. All students who register in May, but do not pay fees before September 8, will be required to re-register on September 19 and 20.

1939 annual has many new features

Business manager Horn reports 1,500 books sold, 1,550 ordered

The 1939 Cornhusker will be ready for distribution Monday, May 15, it was announced yesterday by Max Horn, business manager of the yearbook. Of the 1,556 Cornhuskers ordered, 1,500 have already been sold, and the remaining 50 will be sold at $4.50. "First here first served," said Mr. Horn.

The yearbooks may be obtained at the Cornhusker office in the Union from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Students who have already purchased their Cornhuskers must bring the receipts with them.

Features new section.

The 1939 Cornhusker features a new section, "Student Cavalcade," which is to be a "social survey" of student activities. Another main section of the book is a "Salute to Nebraska." This includes a history of the university and a section devoted to the Nebraska unicameral legislature which met in January. The section is to be patterned after the photographic essays to Life magazine.

Opening the "Student Cavalcade" are several pages covering living conditions in rooming houses and fraternities, a contest of Barb with Greek, registration statistics and student jobholders. Closing the section is a page devoted to "Campus Opinions." This endeavors to give student opinion on world and university affairs.

A section of candid photos and pictures with explanations concerning the Union building has been added. Bill Buchanan is in charge of the special feature photographs and is assisted by Paul Bradley, Bob Hunt and Bob Sandberg. Photography will be a big feature in the editing of this year's Cornhusker.

Members of Sigma Delta Chi, journalism honorary, will meet today at a luncheon meeting in parlor X of the Student Union to elect new officers and to name a delegate to attend the national convention on the west coast in the fall.

Lasting from Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, the delegates will meet in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Palo Alto on successive days. One official delegate will represent the Nebraska chapter of Sigma Delta Chi.

Lightning knocks chip off old block --Union building

The wind howled. The rain fell in torrents. The pitch black sky was rent with streaks of fire that illuminated the heavens. Anyway, it was a bad night.

Suddenly a terrific crash made merry-makers in the Student Union put fingers to their ears. Holding lone vigil in the NEBRASKAN office, Editor-in-chief Howard Kaplan felt the building shake.

It all happened during Saturday night's rainstorm but nobody knew that lightning had struck the Union until Sunday morning when Chief Custodian Charles Boatman saw a hunk of roof railing missing from the southwest corner. Further examinations disclosed a few state shingles gone from the roof. The block of cement from the railing was found buried a foot in the ground.

Luckily nobody was standing where the stone fell. Director Kenneth Van Sant is considering installing lightening rods.

Phalanx elects Emrich new commander

New officers of Phalanx, elected at their last meeting, consist of Roger Emrich, commander; Frank Pusateri, lieutenant commander; Kenneth Worland, adjutant; Dean Irvin, finance officer, and Ray Carlson, historian. Roger Emrich succeeds Bill Williams, former commander.

The meeting this week will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Phi Gamma Delta house.

Completes Season

Don A. Lentz, conductor of the university symphony orchestra, will lead the organization in its final concert of the season May 14 when Mother's Day will be observed with a special program of music in the coliseum.

Compositions selected especially for this concert include "Partita" which Conductor Lentz induced Paul Creston to write in 1937, as a double concerto for flute and violin.

Ag extension marks birthday

Service celebrates 25th anniversary this week

Today marks the beginning of a celebration commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Agricultural extension service on the ag campus.

State-wide plans have been made by farm people to celebrate the silver anniversary today and also special events throughout the balance of the year. Thirty counties are today holding special celebrations honoring long time farm educational workers. Lancaster county honors the extension service tonight on the agricultural college campus and a special convocation for studies in the college is another feature of the celebration.
