Factionists stage lifeless rally

Today's vote to culminate campaigning

Liberals hope to recoup political losses; barbs same old question mark

By Chris Peterson.

After one of the most heated campaigns in years, students of the university will go to the polls today to cast votes for 78 office seeking candidates representing three campus factions.

Today's election will definitely decide the question of factional supremacy on the campus. Sitting atop what might be regarded as the fence of neutrality, the Barb Union party will watch campus Liberals, spurred on by shocking success in the last two elections after years of dormancy, attempt to usurp university political control from the long "in" Progressives.

The Progressives, who have held elective "key" positions for three years hope to shake the Liberals from their heels and edge out their fourth straight win. However, the Liberals, having "drawn blood" in the last two elections, are confident that they will be able to move in for the "kill" by polling a 100 percent vote.

Barbs are "dark horse."

Dark horse in the race is the Barb Union party whose strength remains unknown. Without a doubt, the barbs, if properly and fully organized, would have the voting power to control every elective post on the campus. Just how much organization the party leaders have been able to establish during the last year, cannot be determined. Barb Union leaders, reluctant to discuss their possibilities in this election said, "If everything goes right, we will not need to worry about getting our piece of political pie."

Liberal candidates, running on a "let us show you how to do it right" platform, have had no real

Last forum to consider Way to Peace

Dr. Winnacker, Thomson present opposing views Wednesday at 11

"Which Way to Peace?" is the pertinent topic selected for the last Student Council forum of the year Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock in parlors Y and Z of the Union.

Leon Thomson, executive secretary of the Nebraska Peace Council, and Dr. Rudolph Winnacker of the history department will discuss the question from two opposing sides, an innovation which may be continued in next year's forums should it prove popular.

Open Discussion.

Each speaker will present his views on the subject in talks covering about 15 minutes, after which the floor will be thrown open to general discussion and forum attendants may ask questions of either man.

Open without charge to any student free at that hour, the forum has been arranged by Emma Marie Schuttloffel and Bob Waugh of the Student Council forums committee.

Election eve devoid of much excitement

400 party men provide no fireworks except for minor egg battery; Liberals use new election song

Behind factional bands lighted by an array of home made torches, Politicus filtered slowly up and down sorority row last night as almost 400 rather lifeless Liberal and Progressive pepmen recited their platforms beneath the sorority windows.

Who Can Vote

As students cast ballots for favorites

Research into rules for voting in the campus election for Student Council, publications board and Barb council reveal these regulations:

1. Voters must present pictures and identification cards to obtain their ballots.
2. Names of other candidates may be written in on the ballot.
3. Law college students will be regarded as seniors.
4. Dental college freshmen will be regarded as juniors.
5. Dental college upper classmen will be regarded as seniors.
6. Graduate students may vote for seniors at large.

Students eligible to vote for the various positions are:

Seniors at large: Any registered undergraduates may vote for both men and women.

Arts and science juniors: Any arts and science student may vote for both men and women.

Business administration juniors: Any Bizad student may vote for both men and women.

Teachers college juniors: Any Teachers college student may vote for both men and women.

School of music juniors: Any major in the school.

Pharmacy: Any pharmacy student.

Engineering college juniors: Any student in the college.

Graduate college: Any graduate.

College of dentistry junior: Any student in dental college.

Agricultural college: Any ag student may vote for both men and women.

Publications board: Freshmen vote for sophomores, sophomores vote for juniors, juniors for seniors. Seniors do not vote.

Barb council: Freshmen vote for sophomores, sophomores vote for juniors, juniors for seniors, seniors do not vote.

Completely void of any of the conflict, which so often accompanies these annual pre-election pep sessions, the rallies went off under police escort. Even a battery of eggs which flew between the two factions as they met on the Gamma Phi Beta lawn could bring no more than a few weak and dispirited "Vote Progressive" and "Vote Liberal" shouts from instance during the rally.

Rallies dwindle.

Though both major rallies and the small parade of the barb unionists started off with a bang, they were honeycombed by the early departers, and dwindled to almost half their original sizes by the time the factions disbanded.

Filling the auditorium in social science and Morrill respectively, the Progressive and Liberal parties charged their men with the spirit of the party, and urged them to round up sorority girls, barbs and even members of the opposing faction to vote for their list of candidates.

The Liberal party parading up S street singing the first factional song to be used in the recent election day history, met the Progressive group in the street before the Sigma Delta Tau chapter house. The dance orchestra mounted on a large red truck trying to play the theme songs of the various sorority houses was drowned in "Vote Progressive" yells.

Standing opposite each other, the Progressives on the lawn and the Liberals strung out for some distance up and down 16th street, the two major parties threateningly faced one another and showed the most resistance of any group during the rally.

Awgwan sports graduation theme

Friedel states humor bit to appear Monday

Last issue of the Awgwan, based on the "wither now" theme, is scheduled to appear on the stands next Monday, according to a statement made yesterday afternoon by Leonard Friedel, business manager.

Dedicated to the graduates who will leave university for the last time this spring, the issue will contain several stories dealing with the graduates and their future prospects.

One of the features of this issue will be a serious story by George Frischer concerning the fate of three men who left college together.

Articles on what to do after leaving college written for the information of men and women graduates by Margaret Krause and Bob Hemphill tell graduates exactly what to do according to the type of person they are.

Gory gore, an attractive cover, and candid camera shots taken in the Tasty Pastry shop serve to round out the June issue of the Awgwan.

Cornhuskers issued Friday

Distribution to extend throughout next week

Distribution of the 1939 Cornhuskers will begin Friday, May 19 at 1 o'clock in the year book office in the basement of the Union.

All students who have paid for their copy should bring their receipts. Those who have made only the $2 down payment must bring the remaining $2.75 in order to get their books.

Distribution, according to Max Horn, will continue thru Friday and the following week. Persons who have made down payments but have not yet called for the book within the allotted time will forfeit their initial payment and all remaining year books will be put on sale to anyone for $4.50.
