As I See It by June Bierbower

Joe Binks, the sports writer who got most attention of them all at the A. A. U. meet because he writes for the London Sunday News-World, had quite the time of his life at Lincoln for the meet.

Binks, when he came to this country to see that now famous Princeton mile in which Sydney Wooderson, did the glorious fade-out, was told that when he came out to this country—Nebraska, he wouldn't have to wear clothes because it was so hot. He, however, kept his official British Empire Games suit on every day.

Binks, who held the British mile record of 4:16 for twenty years, never did get to the Olympics, altho he had beaten the Englishman who won the mile at the games in Greece several times. As has been said in many press reports before this one, Binks is not making any excuses for Wooderson's showing at Princeton—says Syd left his race in England. The English scribe is more or less on the spot tho, because he says if Wooderson will be running Saturday in the British championships and if he (Syd) does about 4:06, Binks says "That will make me look bad."

Binks has a daughter at home who keeps care of all his souvenirs—medals, trophies, etc. He was sporting a beautiful A. A. U. official's medal here, and will include that among his collection. He also collects autographs for his girl—he says she has eight or nine autograph books full.

He doesn't mind the weather, but the thing that he noticed most was "The way people full your leg over here after you've known them for only about five minutes." was not wind enough to keep them

Weather—

 Under the present word system, the report may read, clear, partly cloudy, or cloudy.

Professor Blair sees only one disadvantage of the numerical code. Whereas a garbled word may be reorganized, a garbled series of figures will make a weather report meaningless. And there's likely to be plenty of garbled dispatches for several weeks, until observers became used to the new system.

Because of the reduced observational work at the city office, one junior observer will be transferred to some other station as soon as a vacancy occurs. Miss Marie Donlan of Lincoln was added to the staff to help with the increased amount of clerical work.

were turned down because of too high a south wind at the contestants back.

Feature of the day was probably the tying of the world's 100 meter record in two races, by Clyde Jeffrey of the Olympic Club although the wind prohibited the time of :10.2 from going down as an official record. Jeffrey and Mozelle Ellerbe of Tuskegee tied in a preliminary heat in :10.2, while Jeffrey, hailing from Stanford, won the finals in :10.2.

Wolcott sets record.
 Freddie Wolcott, who set a new senior AAU record in the 200 meter lows with a time of :22.9, sailed over the 110 highs in :13.8 in a preliminary heat, but hit the last two hurdles in the finals to finish second to Batiste in :14.1, which also would have been a new AAU record had there been no wind. Only 110 meter high hurdle race ever run faster than the one by Wolcott Tuesday was a :13.7 effort by Spec Towns in Oslo in 1936.
