

Husker traps set for Missouri Tigers

35 Nebraska squad members travel to Columbia for most crucial Big Six game to date

Biff Jones and his crew of 35 Cornhuskers set out last night for Missouri, where they will meet Don Faurot's Mizzou Tigers at Columbia tomorrow in the Big Six's first crucial game of the year. The tilt will determine whether Nebraska or Missouri will remain in the running as week, as he sent them through a long drill on fundamentals Wednesday to polish the squad's blocking and tackling performances. Christman has also been placing emphasis on pass defense, as he fears the Husker passing attack which has completed 14 of 27 passes this year, three of them for touchdowns. Yesterday the Tigers went through a less strenuous workout, and will rest Friday when the Huskers drill there.

Jones has been putting quite a bit of emphasis on the Nebraska aerial game in case the highly touted veteran Missouri line stops the Husker power attack which hasn't been throttled since the Indiana game, so the Tiger game, which is Missouri's Homecoming tilt, may see an aerial circus on the part of both teams. The Biffer drilled his team on passes again last night.

The men making the trip are: Ends: Seemann, Ashburn, Preston, Ray Prochaska, Carper, Ludwig; tackles, Sam Schwartzkopf, Behm, Royal Kahler, Herndon, Muskin, Leik; guards, Ed Schwartzkopf, Abel, Alfson,

At Columbia, Bob Faurot, blocking back, and the coach's brother, is back in the first string lineup after being bothered by a bad elbow. Paul Christman, Bill Cunningham and Clay Cooper have all recovered from bruises which hampered them last Saturday. The Husker lineup with the exception of Francis for Dobson at full will be unchanged from last week unless Herman Rohrig replaces Harry Hopp at halfback. Game Capt. Bill Herrmann will not start in Ed Schwartzkopf's position.

The Missouri line against the Huskers will probably be the same as started against Iowa State last Saturday, unless George Ellis comes back to the right guard position which Jack Crocker held against the Cyclones. The rest of the lineup includes Bud and Bob Orr at ends, Melvin Wetzel and Ken Haas, captain, at tackles; Bob Waldorf at left guard, and Charley Moser at center. Every man, with the exception of juniors Crocker and Ellis is a senior.

Christman ready. The backfield last Saturday had Dick Gale, Jim Starmer, Bob Faurot, and Myron Council, but Christman will replace Gale, and Cunningham will take over Council's duties against Nebraska. Faurot is the only senior, while Gale and Cunningham are sophomores, and Starmer and Christman seniors.

Route to Columbia presented here

For those who are driving to Missouri today the state highway department advises them to take this route:

From Lincoln to Nebraska City through either Union or Syracuse. Cross the river at Nebraska City, follow highway 275 to St. Joseph, and then take the left fork around the town. From St. Joe it is advisable to go east on highway 36 through Chillicothe to the junction with highway 63 north of Macon, then south on 63 through Moberly to Columbia. It is 360 miles, and paved all the way.

An alternate route through Falls City includes 14 miles of gravel, and brings travelers into St. Joe from the west.

Ag club to hold annual party in Union Saturday

The Ag College Boarding club will hold their annual fall party and dance in the Union ballroom tomorrow night.

Tonight there will be an all students' dance from 9 to 12 p. m. Music will be provided by Dave Haun and his orchestra with admission 10c per person.

Yes, Harry, we'd just LOVE to finish second to Oklahoma

One Mr. Harry Hill, writing in the University Daily Kansan, is so intrigued by the Oklahoma football team that he has written the following article concerning second, third, fourth and fifth positions in the Big Six. We thought it might be interesting, so here is the interesting part:

It may be proverbially true that a "house divided against itself can not stand," but Big Six teams, facing the necessity of settling second, third, fourth and fifth positions in the conference standings sometime before the political Thanksgivings, are ignoring the wisdom of the ages this week-end.

For the first time this season the conference is forsaking foreign football theaters entirely to stage a three ring circus in its own tent. The program pits Oklahoma against Iowa State; Kansas against Kansas State; and Missouri against Nebraska.

Iowa State's journey to Norman will be like walking ten miles to get your pocket picked. Headed towards their second consecutive league title with increasing certainty, Tom Stidham's powerful Sooners could reduce the Cyclones to a mere rustle in the tree tops. But the full fury of the Oklahoma strength probably will be reserved for a future date when Nebraska is to be manhandled in Lincoln.

With the verdict against Iowa State anything but a moot question, principal interest centers around the four-way battle for second place. Paul Christman and Missouri will be entertaining a Nebraska eleven that seems to swell with added power from one game to another. Both teams are undefeated in conference play, each has scored victories over the same two Big Six opponents.

The winner will emerge with second place virtually clinched and with the controversial distinction of being Oklahoma's "challenger" for the Big Six crown. There is strong doubt that an all-star eleven from both squads would seriously challenge the steam-rolling Sooners.
