

By June Bierbower.

A number of men have been picked for the West team, and again the Huskers have a representative, this time Sam Schwartzkopf, who should show the coast people why the West team likes to have Husker players on its roster.

To get to the rest of the team—everyone has his own opinion, and we have ours—which is that the powers-that-be missed when they didn't pick George Seemann to play on their team.

The four ends have been named, they being Bill Anahu, Santa Clara; John Shirk and Frank Ivy, Oklahoma; Don Crumbaker, K-State. We haven't any squawk about Anahu, who's probably the best end on the coast, or Ivy, the Big Six's best, but admitting prejudice all the while, we think Seemann, a defensive demon, would have done more for the West's cause than Shirk or Crumbaker, even though those two are fine players. Shirk, Crumbaker and Seemann all showed up about equally in the all-star selections, so it probably was a toss-up among the three, with the Husker end coming out on the bottom.

The Missouri Student has picked its all Big Six team—not a plain all Big Six team but a Glamor Boy team, and at two positions (yes, only two) are Cornhusker football players. At center is Robert Mason Ramey, the Esquire kid himself, and at halfback one Harry Hippity Hopp, the Hastings Hurricane.

Other members of the team are Russell Chitwood of Kansas at one end, and the Orf twins at the other terminal position; Orland Peterson, Iowa State and Justin Bowers, Oklahoma, tackles; Charles Fairman, Kansas State and Stanley Brown, Iowa State, guards; John Bowers, Iowa State, quarterback (oh, my, these Cy-clones); Myron Council, Missouri, fullback; Dick Amerine, Kansas, halfback.

We still think Stillman Rouse, Mizzou's sub end, is far prettier than the Orf boys, and are a bit perturbed about the omission of some of the other Huskers from the team, but then selection was on the basis of photos found in the Mizzou publicity director's office, and sometimes pictures lie, you know.

All this glamor boy stuff, tho, is getting old, so we have decided to pick an all-ugly team. And that is a little harder than it appears at first glance. All the schools seem to send the best pictures of their most handsome players to such literary productions such as the Football News and the Football Annual, but we did the best we could for you, and with due apologies to the boys who make the team, and with congratulations to those who don't—we give you, the 1939 All Ugly Eleven.

Our prize is the backfield. Pride and joy of course is George "Googleye" Cafego of Tennessee. As we have probably told you before Georgie once walked past a dairy and curdled 14 cases of grade A milk.

But right on his heels is Len Eshmont of Fordham. Eshmont earned his living in Hollywood by scaring little babies—to make them cry for the movies, we understand. Ray Mallouf of Southern Methodist is the third member of our quartet, while George Paskvan, Wisconsin, who

Excavation work for field house gets under way

Workmen started Tuesday on excavation for the foundation of a new field house to be built at the north end of Memorial stadium.

Funds for the building were obtained from the blanket WPA appropriation of $116,000 for campus improvement at the university, which was announced last Thursday.

Although the new athletic house will be small in size, it will have ample locker facilities for track and football men, according to John K. Selleck, business manager of athletics.

Work will be slow, as present arrangements indicate it will take from two to four years to complete the structure.

could get three cannon balls inside his oral cavity without stretching his mouth, is our fullback.

Center is another Fordhamite, Lou diFilippo, as we picked him on just general principles. Coming closer to home, one of Kansas U.'s men, Quido Massare, is a guard. Quido might have been a beautiful baby, but he seems to have stopped there. The other one, and captain of our team is Stan Escilonis. For proof, we refer you to page 33 of the Football annual.

Win Pedersen of Minnesota and Ted Konetsky of Pitt are our tackles, and since you've probably seen pictures of them, we'll not go into superlatives about those two.

The hardest problem was the selection of the ends, there being too many lovely pans like Ken Kavanaugh's around. But all good things must come to an end, especially on football teams, so we looked and looked, and finally gave the nod to Bob Nowaskey of George Washington and John Mariucci of Minnesota. The ends, relatively speaking, tho are the weak spots of our team.

Our team's not infallible, inasmuch as we don't claim to have seen pictures of nearly every player. However, it's our selection from those pictures we have seen, so it will have to do until a better one comes around.

YW collects old goods for poor

Y.W. freshman cabinet members have placed boxes in all organized women's houses, including dorms and cooperative houses, in which campus women are to put any old clothes, trinkets or toys they wish to discard.

The Lincoln social welfare agency will recondition and repair the contributions and give them to the underprivileged for Christmas.

Anything will be acceptable. The agency's biggest problem is to find something for the girl of about 12. Hair ribbons, perfume bottles and toy animals are some of the suggestions.

Herman Rohrig and Warren Alfson, who were named on the World Herald's all Big Six team, will receive that paper's Big Six rings from Fred Ware, sports editor, if they are supplied by the manufacturer in time.

Don Fitz ill; may miss tilt with Indiana

Star Husker cager has influenza; Menke leads Hoosier attack

Cornhusker basketball stock took a slump yesterday as Don Fitz, star guard, showed up with influenza. Fitz, who had been named captain for the Indiana game, is almost certain to be forced out of the starting lineup Friday night, and may not see any service whatsoever unless his condition improves rapidly.

Fitz, junior from Jackson high, was expected to carry a major portion of the Husker burden against the Big Ten title contenders from Bloomington. He reported for practice, and suited up, but took no part in the drill.

Work on fast break. Browne worked his team on the fast break, as both the varsity and "B" squads faced frosh teams in scrimmages. The "B" team is rounding into shape, and will meet McCook junior college at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon on the coliseum floor.

Les Livingston, sophomore prospect from Hastings, was working at Fitz' guard spot last night. Livingston did not get into the Indiana game, but is one of the best looking first year men on the team.

Hartmann Goetze, sophomore and Bud Tallman, at forwards; junior Al Randall at center, and sophomore Sid Held completed the varsity five last night which worked. Randall has his work cut out for him Friday night, as he will face Bill Menke, Hoosier center, who was fourth in Big Ten scoring last year as he piled up 120 points.

'West' squad list grows

Three Sooners, two K-Staters make team

Fifteen football players have accepted invitations to play on the West team in the East-West all-star game, one of them being Husker Sam Schwartzkopf, tackle. The eastern roster of 22 men is complete.

Five other Big Six men have been chosen, two of them from Kansas State, and three from Oklahoma. Don Crumbaker, end, and Bill Beezley, guard, are the Wildcats, while ends John Shirk and Frank Ivy, along with blocking back Dick Favor, will compete for the Sooners.

Others named. Other men who have been named thus far are Kay Eakin, Arkansas halfback; Leroy Zimmerman, San Jose State back; Ollie Cordill, Rice, halfback; Bill Anahu, Santa Clara, end; John Schiechl, Santa Clara's all-American center; Stan Andersen, Stanford tackle; Hampton Pool, Stanford guard; Lee Artoe, California tackle; Bulldog Turner, Hardin-Simmons, center.

Biff Jones, co-coach of the west team with Babe Hollingberry of Washington State, will leave Sunday for the coast, at which time Schwartzkopf will probably go also.
