Eames speaks to convo today at 11

Aestheticist will urge unification of arts in student's curriculum

Dr. Henry Purpont Eames, professor of aesthetics and musical art at Scripps college, Claremont, Calif., will begin a two day series of talks before university groups today at 11 a. m., when he speaks on "The Enjoyment of Music" at a general convocation in the Temple.

Considered one of Paderewski's most brilliant students, Dr. Eames is a former Nebraskan and a famous composer and artist. Chairman of the piano department of the old Lincoln School of Music from 1898 to 1908, Dr. Eames has devoted himself to the spread of the ideal that every man is entitled to an understanding of the beauty, power, truth, and health that music can bring.

Required music—culture.

To this end, Dr. Eames has devoted his time to the development of the Scripps plan for developing music-culture as a requirement in the curriculum of colleges. Under his plan music-culture is taught in humanities courses just as literature, history, or philosophy.

Dr. Eames will supplement his convocation address this morning with a number of select piano compositions. Besides the reputation he has gained through his Scripps plan and the musical numbers he has published, Dr. Eames is also recognized as an authority on primitive music and the music of China and Japan. He is best known for his lecture recitals, given at the piano, similar to the one he will deliver this morning.

Appears this afternoon.

For students who are unable to hear Dr. Eames this morning and for those who wish to hear him again he will present a special harmony hour program this afternoon at 4 in parlor Y of the Union. Using the Carnegie collection, he will conduct an all Wagnerian program. The program will include selections from "Lohengrin," "Siegfried's Rhine Journey," "Die Meistersinger," and the "Liebestod."

At a noon luncheon in the Union before the general faculty, he will discuss "Music and Art in Their Relation to the Study of the Humanities." Tomorrow noon, before the fine arts faculty, he will talk on "The Functions of a School of Fine Arts in a University."

Ag enters 22 cattle in show

Some animals slated for auction at Denver

Twenty-two head of prize beef cattle from the college of agriculture today are on their way to Denver where they will enter the National Western stock show this weekend. There, they will compete with other "blue bloods" for western championships.

Prof. R. R. Thalman of the animal husbandry department, who will go to Denver Saturday to supervise the showing of the cattle, said the shipment includes Herefords, Shorthorns and Angus. In past years, the college's entrants have scored high at the Denver show.

Some of the animals entered will be sold at the auction following the sale. They will include two Hereford bulls, two Angus bulls, one Shorthorn bull and two Shorthorn heifers, five Hereford steers and five Shorthorn steers. Other animals entered from here will not be sold but will return to the campus herd.

No collegiate judging team will represent Nebraska at Denver this year but many 4-H club boys throughout the state are planning on exhibiting their baby beeves there.

Bryan award competition offers $25

Poli Sci students must submit papers on any related topic by April 1

Offered this year to students registered in any political science course is the William Jennings Bryan award for the best written essay on any subject concerned with the political sciences.

The award, $25, will be given in the latter part of April. Deadline for entries, according to Prof. L. W. Lancaster, is April 1. The papers may be in the form of an essay or other paper submitted in connection with any political science course in which the student is registered, or a paper specifically prepared for this contest. Entries should contain at least 3,000 words and not more than 6,000.

Committee may withhold prize

The contest is open to all students or graduate students who are taking a course in political science. The committee of judges composed of L. W. Lancaster, political science department head; Roger C. Shumate, and David Fellman, reserve the right to withhold the prize if no worthy paper is submitted.

The prize money is part of an approximate $250 given by "free silver" Bryan, illustrious Nebraskan, to create interest in government.

Due to the small response given the contest by students in former years, the award was not offered. Members of the committee in charge will furnish additional information to students if desired.

However most collegians after they are here play with the thought of going to some other school, in their mind more Utopian and better fitted to their cause.

Where would you like to go to school?

Charles Shubert, Ag sophomore: I live here in Lincoln and I'd like to go away from home. If I had a choice I suppose it would be Southern California because I believe, speaking as a whole, the school is much better and I know it isn't quite so cold.

Betty O'Brien, Arts and Science freshman:

Kansas State would be my choice. It has a nice campus and the most beautiful boys. And the school isn't quite so tough. At Nebraska there are so many requirements. (See REPORTER on page 4)

Business hits decade high

Activity in state gains 8 percent over 1938

Nebraska's business closed the year 1939 at its highest level since June, 1930, according to Arthur Aulsebrook, university statistician. For the year as a whole, business was 8 per cent higher than the 1938 average. The general business index for December, after seasonal adjustment, was 5.6 points higher than November—bank debits, department store sales, postal receipts, and building construction rising sharply after being adjusted for seasonal variation.

The table below shows the composite business index, together with the latest individual barometers available. Each index has been adjusted to remove seasonal variation and calendar irregularities, and has been expressed as a percentage of the average level of 1935 to 1937. The combined figure is made up of the first six individual indices listed below plus new car sales, each component being weighted in proportion to its economic importance.

Farm youth seeks voice

Panel closes meeting of ag extension workers

Nine members of the Nebraska Rural Youth group voiced a demand for recognition yesterday in a panel discussion which highlighted the closing day's session of the annual conference of Nebraska agricultural extension workers at the Union.

The Rural Youth group, composed of farm youths too old for 4-H work and too young for a major voice in adult groups, were represented by the state president, Don Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Marton Kuhr, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Lippincott, Mrs. Ted Olinger, Miss Xenia Lindberg, Miles Cadwallader, jr., and Miss Peggy Beyl.

N. W. Gaines, of the university agricultural extension service arranged for the discussion.

Cadwallader declared that the group wishes to force recognition from farm bureau and extension organizations, and observed that the greatest needs of this group is a definite recreational program. All delegates insisted they should have more representation in farm organizations.

The so-called county land use planning program, which in reality is much broader in scope than "land use," as discussed by a number of home agents and agricultural agents during the Wednesday morning session. They agreed that farm women should have a voice on county land use planning committees. Intensive (See FARM YOUTH on page 4)

Council drops Woerner's resignation

Committee on rallies reports, Prom board budget gets approval

Resignation of Otto Woerner, barb, was dropped by the Student Council after Prof. E. W. Lantz, Council advisor, suggested that any action be disposed of and that the Student Council start out with a "clean slate."

Woerner submitted his resignation at the last meeting of the Council after the election of the Prom committee which resulted in a landslide majority for the progressive party. The barb faction received no representation on the committee.

At that meeting, Woerner burst into fiery oratory condemning the Council as a whole and deploring the existence of politics in an election within that body.

Barbs want him to continue.

At yesterday's meeting Woerner stated that the barb organization desired him to continue as one of their representatives and for that reason implied that he wished his resignation be cancelled. The council acting on the advice of a committee to investigate the matter voted not to accept his resignation.

Marian Bradstreet, co-chairman of the Junior-Senior prom committee submitted a budget of expenses for the spring dance of $1,095, seven hundred of which is to be used in obtaining a suitable orchestra. The remainder of the approximate $1,095 will be used for miscellaneous expenses such as scenery, tickets, publicity, and rent for the coliseum. Miss Bradstreet stated that the budget was based upon expenditures incurred by former Prom committees.

The budget was approved unanimously. Council members underwrote the budget so that in the case of any deficit it could be made up by the Council to prevent debt.

'Interfraternity council hasn't the power'... Lantz.

Lowell Michael, chairman of the political rally committee, reported on the newly devised mass rally which the council hopes to put into effect before the spring election. Michael said that the interfraternity council was definitely opposed to the proposed form of rally and also any form of political rally whatsoever. He branded the interfraternity council as a bunch of "sourpusses" for their action concerning the new and old form of rallying.

Professor Lantz said that the Greek council could take no effective action on the matter, in that only the Student Council has the power to act upon matters relative to faction rallying.

An honors convocation committee was appointed to assist the faculty at the convocations. On the committee appointed by Marian Kidd, Council president, are Ruth Clark, Robert Drew, and Adna Dobson.

Ag experts plan insect campaign

Initial plans for the 1940 Nebraska campaign against grasshoppers, mormon crickets and chinch bugs were mapped out in Denver, entomologists at the college of agriculture said today upon their return from the conference held there. Basically, the campaign will follow similar lines as in 1939 and previous years.

Director W. H. Brokaw of the extension service; L. Buchholz, state secretary of agriculture; and O. S. Bare, extension entomologist attended the Denver regional gathering. There, they met with other state representatives and officials of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine.
