Letter of Introduction
(or)

Dear Readers:

This is to introduce to you the second semester DAILY NEBRASKAN, a student publication which has behind it a long record of campus service (39 years), and which hopes, with your interest and assistance, dear readers, to register new peaks on the chart of collegiate newspaper achievement during the coming months.

Tangible results in the way of a bigger and better University of Nebraska will be the aim of the new DAILY staff. This does not mean that we can expect a new million dollar library to shoot up between Sosh and Teachers one of these frosty mornings or that Nebraska will play in the next Rose Bowl game. But a little initiative and drive can produce handsome results, as witness the Union building in which this letter is written. Once it was a student dream, but the students refused to dismiss it with merely waking up and yawning, and so, with the cooperation of the administration they realized it in marble and stone. That, dear readers, is known as "tangible results" and we will develop our own ideas along that line subsequently.

Aside from that it is our earnest wish to have the DAILY reflect the entire student body and not just the few persons who comprise its staff. If, during the few months it is our privilege to oversee the paper, we could build up in the student body a feeling of personal interest in the work of the DAILY, we would pass on into that mystic extra-academic world next June with a smile on our lips. If you, dear readers, occasionally would drop into our little sanctum and tell us news tips that we might not know of—if you would now and then tell us wherein you think we fail (or shine), we will try and reciprocate by moulding the DAILY along popular lines.

Now if you are still with us (and a host of friends assure us that no one reads beyond the society column), we'll sum up our entire semester's projected program by saying that to a man the new staff will strive to give you the best DAILY you have ever seen, but that whereas an interesting paper makes for interested readers, in the collegiate field it works even better the other way around.

Degrees--

in secondary education. Van Den Brink's thesis was a discussion of the legislation pertaining to secondary school curriculum in the states comprising the North Central association. Gish dealt with similar legislation in regard to the southern association and made a comparison between the two.

Geographer, administrator.

Harry E. Hoy, assistant instructor of geography at the University of Illinois, took his Ph. D. degree in geography. He completed a study of the tablelands of north central Nebraska. Harry R. Grow, formerly on the faculty of the University of Tulsa, received his degree in school administration. Grow's research developed guiding principles and policies for the administration of the small school.

Walter Kiener, who is a former graduate assistant at the university, majored in botany. Kiener made a sociological analysis of the vegetation of the alpine zone on Longs Peak, Colorado. The graduation list is as follows:

THE WOMEN SEE MEN.
Man is what a woman marries.
Men have two feet, two hands, and sometimes two wives, but never more than one collar button or one idea at a time. Like Turkish cigarettes, men are all made of the same material, the only difference is that some are better disguised than others. Generally speaking, they may be divided into three classes—husbands, bachelors and widowers. An eligible bachelor is a man of obstinancy surrounded with suspicion.

Husbands are of three varieties—prize, surprise, and consolation prize. Making a husband out of a man is one of the highest plastic arts known to civilization. It requires science, sculpture, common sense and faith hope and charity—mostly charity. It is a psychological marvel that a soft, fluffy, tender, violet-scented sweet thing like woman should enjoy kissing a big, awkward, stubby-chinned thing like man.

If you wear gay colors, rouge and startling hats, he hesitates to take you out. If you wear a little brown tailor-made suit, he takes you out and stares all evening at a woman in gay colors, rouge and a startling hat.

If you are the clinging-vine type, he doubts whether you have a brain. If you are the modern type, an advanced and independent woman, he doubts whether you have a heart. If you are silly, he longs for a bright mate and if you are brilliant, he longs for a playmate. If you are popular with other men, he is jealous, and if you are not, he hesitates to marry a wall-flower. If you please him, he seldom mentions it, but if you displease him, he tells you about it, especially if you are his wife.

Life is a problem and man is not the equation for figuring it out.
