Annual junior Ak-Sar-Ben attracts 73 student showmen

Biggest entry in the beef cattle division with 26 collegians entering Shorthorns and Herefords

Seventy-three Ag men have already drawn their animals for the competition in the annual Junior Ak-Sar-Ben, scheduled for March 16 on ag campus, Wayne Smiley, manager of the show, said yesterday.

With two weeks yet before the student showmen go into the ring in the annual contest to compete for the title of grand champion showman, Smiley said that the entries this year would probably be as large as last year's record-breaking number of 120.

All the horses available for showing have already been drawn, according to the animal husbandry department. Thirteen horses are being groomed for the show.

Biggest entry so far is in the beef cattle division, with twenty-six students signifying their intentions of showing Shorthorns, Herefords, or Angus.

Students fitting animals.

Ten students have drawn sheep and twelve have drawn dairy cattle.

Smiley said that most of the entrants are already fitting their animals and preparing them for showing, but that there are still plenty of good individuals left in all divisions except horses.

Awards will be given on the basis of fitting for the ring before the show, along with showmanship in the ring.

Smiley urged that all students interested go to the animal husbandry office and draw an animal in order to get started fitting by next week. Student workers are assisting the competitors and the barns are being turned over to the entrants.

Award silver trophy.

Grand champion showman of the show March 16 will be awarded a silver trophy, according to the manager, Ray Crawford, now a sophomore, won the trophy last year showing a sheep. He is ineligible this year because of last year's triumph.

Prizes will be given in all five divisions for the first five places and the first and second place winners will be entitled to compete for grand champion. Prizes—first, cane; second, tie; third, tie; fourth, tie; fifth, ribbon. All prize winners will receive ribbons.

The Junior Ak-Sar-Ben will be a whole week-end affair for Ag campus, Lyle Roberts, president of Block and Bridle, student honorary sponsoring the show, announced.

Jobs disprove home ec—wedding inevitability

Home economics and marriage are no longer the inevitable combination as is clearly seen by the letters offering positions on the desk of Miss Margaret Fedde, head of the home economics department. Six high salaried positions offered at the mid-year is encouraging to home economic majors.

Research has become a woman's field and a research assistant in housing is sought at Corvallis, Oregon. A notice of an opening for a home demonstration agent was sent from Missouri.

Other positions.

Other positions offered for graduate students from Nebraska University include educational advisor of the National Dairy Council, instructor in experimental foods and household equipment at the State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash.; instructor of nutrition and assistant in institution administration at the University of Kansas City.

While these offers seem outstanding in their salaries and opportunities, the applicants must have at least Master's degrees.

nual Junior Ak-Sar-Ben ball will be held in the student activities building and will start the week-end's activities. Gene Pieper and his band will play as Ag men and women gather to start the festivities for the tenth annual event.

Finale of the week-end will be the showmanship competition Saturday in the pavilion of the horsebarn where Ag men will compete for the title of grand champion showman. Special events will be interspersed between the classes during the evening.

Countryman staff makes policy changes

At a general meeting of all the members of the Cornhusker Countryman staff last Tuesday, Feb. 27, several important pieces of legislation were enacted. Nearly all of the regular staff members were present and two motions concerning the policy of the magazine were passed almost unanimously.

The first motion was to set a definite number of subscriptions or advertising required from each member of the entire business staff to entitle him to a position on the masthead of each month's issue.

Beginning with the March issue all members of the editorial staff will be required to contribute either work or some usable written material for each issue to be entitled to a position on the masthead, according to the second motion passed.

The masthead of the magazine will be made flexible insofar as the assistants and associates are concerned, with the ones who have contributed the most toward that issue receiving the more important positions.

Spring party tickets on sale

Tickets are on sale for the Ag spring party March 9. Keith Gilmore, president of the Ag executive board, announced yesterday. Student salesmen are canvassing the campus.

Chief social event of the spring on Ag campus, the spring party this year will feature the annual presentation of the Goddess of Agriculture, a senior home economics student elected by the home economics students, as Ag men and women gather in the student activities building.

Theme of the event is a "southern lawn party." Lee Williams and his Stepping Tone music will be featured.

Ag breakfast to feature Story

Another Ag college tradition will be kept on Sunday March 17, when the annual Pre-Easter Breakfast will be held in the Activities building. The speaker will be Reverend Bert L. Story, District Superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal church. Last year the breakfast was held at 6:45 in the morning, but this year the time is set for 7 o'clock.

The breakfast is sponsored by the Ag college religious council which has made up of eight students—two from each of the three churches near the campus, one each from the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.; the ministers from each of the churches, and the Y. M. sponsor C. D. Hayes and the Y. W. sponsor. The faculty sponsor is Dr. T. H. Gooding.

An elaborate breakfast will be served, accompanied by a regular program with the room appropriately decorated. Chairman of the affair is Don Crosier, and chairmen of the various committees are as follows: refreshments, Dorothy Peters and YW president, Pat McMahon; program, Bob Messersmith; decorations, Bob Wilson; and tickets, Carol Voss and Marion Peterson. Tickets will be available beginning Monday, March 4, and the price per person is 20 cents.

Make two changes in county agents

Two changes in county agricultural agents have been made in Nebraska. Forrest J. Scrivner of Hitchcock county has resigned his position there to become manager of a newly organized farm service company, and will move soon with his family to Haigler where he intends to devote time to his registered herd of Hereford cattle. Greth Dunn, who has served as agricultural agent in Dixon county for six and one-half years, will fill the vacancy.

Erville Hughes has resigned from the Theford district in the sandhills to go with an insurance company to manage farms. He will be replaced by Jesse Skinner, who is a graduate of the University college.

Hathaway speaks on vitamin research

All members of the faculty and graduate students are invited to attend a talk by Mr. I. L. Hathaway on "The Vitamin Research of the Dairy Department" at 4 p. m. today in Room 106, Plant Industry Building.

Walter Crumbliss and Paul McMillen were awarded the Hynes scholarships. Sears & Roebuck scholarship winners were Dale Landgren, Robert Ranning, Oscar Thomas, Gerald Abbenhaus, Lawrence Boydston, Warren Sahs, Ronald Jerauld, Donald Brown, Fred Patterson, Louise Gill, Geraldine Fouts, Jane Sherburn.

Ag council plans costume mixer

Costumes and masks for Ag men and women will be in order tonight as the social council plays host at its masquerade mixer in the Student Activities building.

The first masquerade party to be held this year on Ag campus, added zest will be given by the prizes being offered for the most ingenious costumes, along with novelty numbers that will be interspersed with dancing.

The party is a mixer and not a date affair, Chairman Ray Crawford said. The price will be ten cents for those who mask and 15 cents for those who are not costumed. It is open to all university students.

Norma Jean Campbell, and Della Marie Ingalls.

Among other requirements for eligibility for the awards was that the student had an average grade of at least 80 with no flunks, conditions or incompletes and not more than one grade in the 60's. Students who had received either a Regent's or Union Pacific scholarship were not eligible.

PICTURED are three of the styles in much favor for campus casual coats. They're classics, and should be in every college girl's wardrobe because they're ready to go almost anywhere, anytime.

On the left, ENGLISH PADDOCK, of a camel hair and wool fabric, in free and easy lines.

In the center, WINSTON CASUAL, with a trim, youthful look because of the collarless neckline.

On the right, WINSTON REEFER, a single breasted style that is wonderfully slenderizing. Note the whittled waistline. In black and white, navy and white, or brown and white flecked.
