The Council keeps faith

Yesterday the Student Council voted unanimously to place election of the Junior-Senior Prom committee on the fall ballot, thus allowing the student body to elect members to the committee. In this action, the Council kept faith with the students which it aims to represent, inasmuch as last week the campus indicated its wish to have this done. At the same time, the Council voted to withdraw from future sponsorship of the Prom inasmuch as it no longer felt willing to back financially a committee which it did not have the privilege of appointing, and no one can deny that if that is their wish, Council members are well within their rights in so doing.

The sole interest of the DAILY in this matter is that the Prom committee, as an important activity, be elected by the student body instead of by a small political group. It does not feel that the Council in its action yesterday did anything to hinder the accomplishment of this end. All that remains is to find a new sponsor for the Prom. The Innocents society already has stepped forward to indicate its desire to become that new sponsor. In a letter to the faculty sub-committee on student organizations and social functions, which has jurisdiction over the Prom's future now, the Innocents point out their qualifications for the job, and it seems altogether likely that under that organization's guidance the Prom can be continued in a manner that will be satisfactory to everyone.

After all, that is an objective on which no one yet has disagreed—to present each year a party which the student body will feel is worthy in every respect to officially close the university formal season.

Every week has its Friday. Winchell has his girl Friday. In short, we are looking for a girl Saturday.

Yes, we are looking for a girl any Saturday and a girl whom we shall know as Saturday. Nothing like getting all that you can while you're at it.

The girl "Saturday" is one who can dish up a column in a pinch and grace our offices in the meantime. Nothing like having the offices graced.

Beauty queens need not hesitate to apply. Especially beauty queens with cars. That means any gal who drives a car. Because any gal who drives a car is a potential beauty queen. At least she will have the major qualification. But that's in the realm of irrealism.

"Saturday" must be intelligent. "Saturday" mustn't be like the little lass who thought the Battle of Sedan was a necking party. "Saturday" mustn't be so lazy that she won't exercise discretion. Being a tree lover, if "Saturday" has a willow figure, oke. "Saturday" must be a good worker. Remember, the model succeeds only after years of attireless efforts. If Saturday has these qualifications, she'll be worth her wit in gold.

Seriously, the only qualification is that the gal

RUSSIAN AWAKENING

Indication that the Russian people may be becoming aware of the fact that there is a war is to be found in the report of Spencer Williams, secretary of the American-Russian chamber of commerce. Speaking in a radio broadcast from London, he pointed out a few facts which he says journalists have not been allowed to release from Moscow.

According to his statement the great mass of the Russian people are not aware that their army is engaged in military activities, but are at the same time beginning to connect the returning streams of wounded soldiers, the high costs of living—these, it is said, have mounted 35 percent in the last six months—and the declining standard of living.

All this indicates that conditions must indeed be critical in a nation which has never been over supplied with food. The available food has become so restricted that peasants are coming from the hinterland to seek food in Moscow. This in a land where the problem of food was one of the principal bases upon which the communist revolution rested. It appears that the miracle of organization which German experts were to provide has as yet failed to materialize, at least as far as the civilian population is concerned.

RELAXED TENSION

Tension in one sector of the Balkans seems to have abated somewhat tonight. King Carol of Rumania probably breathes a bit easier as a result of the announcement that the Russians and the Rumanians will sign a non-aggression pact.

Tension in Rumania over the question of Bessarabia, which Rumania gained from Russia after the World war and which Russia has never renounced as part of her territory has been great for a period of several months. Today it appears that some disposition of this problem will be made. The Russian legation in Bucharest announced that Foreign Commissar Molotov would soon visit the Rumanian capital to sign a non-aggression pact, thus freeing Carol from one of his multitudinous worries.

In spite of King Carol's blustering attitude during his recent visit to Bessarabia, in spite of his announced determination to defend this territory to the last man, it is probable that he will more than welcome any guarantee which the Russians may condescend to give. The strength of such a non-aggression pact will have to be proven, for pacts of that nature enjoy the most varied lives in these modern times.

A poll taken recently under the auspices of the "Daily Texan" definitely settled the question of whether the coed came to college to get her "M.R.S." or her "B.S." or "B.A."

According to confessions of 60 graduating seniors, 85 per cent of the girls will work the first year out of college; 10 per cent will be married; and 5 per cent will go home.

The "Pitt News" figured out how long it would take a student to go through their institution if he were to take every course offered. They found that the student would have to take 55,320 credit hours of work.

If a student had the brains of Einstein, the age of Methuselah, and the wealth of Croesus he could take the maximum number of hours allowed in the two regular and special sessions of each year, and finish the course in 92 years.

Last Sunday one of the most varied congregations of planes ever assembled took to the air in Columbus, Ohio, and flew to Athens, Ohio, about 60 miles away. The tour marked one of the largest air tours ever staged by any college flying club. Members of the club are Ohio State students who have enrolled in the CAA course offered by the government. Students enthusiastic about their program organized the club and mapped out a series of eight trips to be taken during the spring semester.

"Saturday" must have a few punny ideas. So women at large, whip us a sample column and either send it to us through the mails or bring it in person. If the price of a three cent stamp holds you back, refunds will be made at a later date, let us say July 4th.
