

Senator Norris ...

Cries G-Men are 'bullies'; Regler says 'No, gentlemen'

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, according to Sergeant Regler, director of the university police, have always been gentlemen, employed only legitimate tactics, and never resorted to any kind of third degree questioning in the police work he has done with them.

Senator Norris of Nebraska charged before the senate Tuesday, as reported in news stories from Washington, that police methods used by the FBI were a menace to democratic institutions. He charged among other things that the FBI had a regular "formula for intimidation" of persons they arrested, and that they put prisoners thru third degree questioning.

Don't raise voices.

"In fact," said Regler, "I have even heard the Special Agents working on cases here caution police officers, who raised their voices while questioning suspects, to never do so under any circumstances."

Norris had been condemning the G-Men for alleged mistreatment of suspected communists arrested in a raid in Detroit and charged with enlisting soldiers to fight for the loyalist army in the Spanish civil war.

Protection first.

Attorney General Jackson has defended the FBI, as did Senator Lee of Oklahoma Wednesday in the senate. Said Lee, "We must guard against infringement of our civil liberties, but at the same time, we must protect our citizens against the activities of these foreign agents."

Regler has worked with the G-Men on various occasions, including the case last year when Nebraska hall was entered and an automatic pistol stolen.

Home economics honorary initiates eight members

Omicron Nu, national home economics honorary sorority, initiated eight new members Wednesday evening. The new initiates are Carol Briggs, Vivian Brown, Helen Elizabeth Claybaugh, Ethel Diedrickson, Doris DeLong, Virginia Ostergard, Lila Meyerott, and Doretta Schlaphoff.

These new members were announced at a tea sponsored jointly by Omicron Nu and Phi Upsilon Omicron, also a national home economics sorority. All home economics girls whose averages were above eighty were invited to attend the tea, at which the new found in the catalog for the first semester of 1939-40. Students must present their identification cards with picture at the registrar's office for their credit books. Ag college students may secure their credit books at Dean Burr's office.

Students must fill out their applications for registration and leave them with a statement of outside activities with the dean of their college for approval. The dean of women may be consulted during registration, but her signature is not necessary.

Fees are payable before Sept. 4, 1940; otherwise a late registration fee will be charged. A late fee for graduate students and Lincoln teachers will be charged after noon of September 28. Students will receive a statement of fees by August 17, and the office of the finance secretary must be notified if the statement is not received. Summer addresses of students should be left in the office of the finance secretary.

New students will be registered Sept. 16, 17 and 18.
