

'Yell King' will rule Huskers

A new "Yell King" will lead the crowds at this year's gridiron battles. Ralph Worden, member of last year's cheering squad, has been chosen by the Innocents society for the post in 1940-41. Worden, a senior and member of Alpha Tau Omega, succeeds Roy Proffitt.

Tryouts for the other six positions on the squad will start the middle of this week, Worden announced yesterday. He and members of the Innocents cheer leader committee want as many men as possible to try out for the six positions.

Announcements of time and place of the tryouts will be made in Wednesday's DAILY.

Men who are active and not afraid to yell before a crowd are wanted for the squad.

Other members of the tryout committee besides Worden are John Mason, chairman; Elton Wiley, George Gostas and Gerald Spahn.

Flory organizes uni democratic club for students

With the race a hot one between Roosevelt and Willkie and their respective parties for the presidential chair in November, students on this campus will make their first move to take an active part in the campaign when on Tuesday the university democratic club will be formed in the Union.

Under the authorization of the state and national central democratic committees, Robert Flory, law school junior, will organize and direct the purposes of the new-born club.

Meanwhile, Willkie boosters on the campus are preparing to do their part towards the furthering of republican policy through a Willkie-for-President club, with plans for that organization near completion.

Reservations go on sale

John K. Selleck, athletic finance director and manager of student affairs, will place between 150 to 200 unclaimed reservations for the Husker football games on sale Monday. Tickets may be purchased in Selleck's office in the coliseum.

Freshman cap sales deplete stock on hand

Because of the great demand, the distribution of freshman caps has been temporarily interrupted until Friday when the stock will be replenished. Freshmen who were unable to purchase their caps during registration and those who registered late may purchase their cards at the DAILY office any time this week.

The red caps will be worn until the Homecoming game when freshmen and sophomores will stage a tug of war. If the freshmen lose, they must wear their caps until after the first frost.

UN registrar promises aid to conscripts

The effects of conscription struck nearer to home today when Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, registrar of the university, announced plans for dealing satisfactorily with the adjustment of problems relating to credits and fees of students called for any branch of military service whether resulting from enlistment or conscription.

All rulings by the administration in regard to military service apply to those students who enlist of their own volition and to those conscripted. The registrar's office will require that all men called to service present orders or a letter from the commanding officer indicating membership in some branch of service in good standing, and also showing a call to service at a specified date.

Fees refunded.

Tuition fees will be refunded to all students who are called to duty at a date too early to satisfactorily complete the work for which they are registered. Several

Hueftle urges attendance at barb meeting

Director thinks total membership of Union will exceed last year

In urging that all unaffiliated men attend the initial Barb Union meeting of the semester Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in parlors XYZ of the Union, Gilbert Hueftle, city campus organization director, asserted that on the basis of present registration of barbs the union membership this year will exceed last year's total of over 700 members.

The barb union is an organization of non-fraternity men on the campus which provides athletic, social and political activities. To facilitate participation in the athletic and social program the men are organized into clubs of ten or more each represented by the political program of the Barb Union.

Four clubs averaging 41 members each, representing both ag and city campus were registered by Wednesday of last week and participated in the first scheduled barb hour dance Friday evening.

Army has no claim on CAA trainees

Students who enroll in the Civil Aeronautics flight training program are not pledged to enter the military forces of the United States on completion of their course, Dean O. J. Ferguson, of the college of engineering, stated Saturday.

The university had requested a ruling on the CAA pledge because of misinterpretation which arose in several cases. In the original order there was a clause which many understood as a pledge to enter the army at the completion of the training course. The Civil Aeronautics Authority in Washington notified Dean Ferguson by telegram Saturday morning that the clause is "not intended to set time or circumstances for military service; merely provides statement of intention to use training in national defense."

Indicates willingness use training. "Under this official interpretation," said Dean Ferguson, "it is clear that the student is not pledged to enter military service at the close of the course, but that he simply indicates that if and when he is called for military service he will use this special preparation in national defense."

Tassels will begin Theater season ticket sales Tuesday

With the opening of their season ticket sales drive Tuesday, the University Theater will begin its 26th consecutive dramatic season.

In charge of sales are the Tassels, women's pep club. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the organization. The season book which includes admission to five productions is $2.

The student dramatists will make this season's debut in the fast moving "See My Lawyer," fashioned after "What a Life" which enjoyed a successful run on Broadway last season. All productions will be directed by Armand Hunter, instructor of speech in the school of fine arts, who voiced the hope that "by active student participation University theater would attract wider campus interest."

All students eligible.

University Theater, formerly the University Players, is an outlet for all students regularly enrolled in the university interested in acting. Tryouts are held for each play, and the selection of cast is made on a competitive basis. All plays are double cast so there will be replacements in case of ineligibility or illness.

The cast for the first show "See My Lawyer" will be posted Monday outside the main office of the school of fine arts.

Freshmen to take Cornhusker oath Wednesday

"On to the coliseum!" is the byword for Wednesday morning, when the freshman class stages a parade at 11 a. m. from the Temple to the coliseum where it will take the Cornhusker oath.

The freshman band will lead the parade which will assemble at the Temple building at 10:30 a. m. The old N. U. "victory bell," used last year to drum up Husker spirit, will again be hauled out for the occasion. Members of Corn Cobs and Tassels, men's and women's pep societies, will man the bell and rally the Husker frosh. The parade will proceed up 12th street from the Temple to the mail, where it will wend down to 14th street and thence to the coliseum.

ident Bob Aden as master of ceremonies will introduce Mortar Board Prexy Pat Sternberg, who will speak of the university's activity program. Aden will also introduce Dean of Women Helen Hosp, Dean T. J. Thompson, and Chancellor Boucher. Football Coach "Biff" Jones will be presented as will Prof. Clarence Frankforter of the chemistry department.

Ralph Worden, varsity cheer leader, will lead the convocation in Husker yells, and Hermann Decker in university songs. Marches will be aired by the frosh band.

The convocation will end with ceremonies in which the freshman class will take the Cornhusker oath, an oath which pledges lifelong loyalty to Nebraska U.

Eleven o'clock classes will be dismissed for the convocation and all freshmen are urged to be present.
