

Students chop wood in course, gather blisters

Blisters, blisters and more blisters tell the story of the girls who are chopping wood for the practical work in the Campcraft course. Groups of girls under the direction of Miss Barbara Ellen Joy have been going out each day to ag campus to build fires, pitch tents and in other ways limber up their muscles.

Incidentally, if you have been wondering what the two big piles of wood at ag were for, fires are the answer. Lectures on knives and hatchets, fire building and outdoor cooking are given each evening at 5 in Grant Memorial.

This evening the class will cook supper outdoors. Members will be divided into several groups with a leader for each. Each group will cook its own supper separately. Another outdoor meal will be cooked Saturday noon. The entire course, both practical work and reading, must be completed by Saturday for qualification for the campcraft certificate.

Coeds decide blouses best photo attire

Sorority women, as a whole, have decided that blouses, of any color or shade, and adorned by pearls or clips, will be the attire worn for the Cornhusker pictures. Mr. Townsend feels that blouses give the best appearance for the pictures in the sorority section of the year book.

Fraternalities are instructed to wear the usual suit coats, white shirts, and ties.

Pictures should be taken at Townsend Studios, 226 So. 11th street, and will cost $1.25. Each sorority or fraternity has two specific weeks in which to have its members and pledges go to the studio for their pictures. Several other Greek houses have the same two weeks period. The first fraternity or sorority which has 100 percent turnout to the studio before any of the other fraternities or sororities, which are competing in the same week, will receive a copy of the 1941 Cornhusker free.

Co-ed destroys editor tradition

(ACP).—Old-school newsmen used to grumble from time to time: "Women make bum newspapermen." But dis ain't da old school, see? What we had in mind was news that co-eds at the University of California have broken down the tradition that the editor of The Daily Californian must be a man. Miss Sarah Henderson, 21, of Pasadena, majoring in political science and "queen of college journalists," has won the master-minding job.

Harvest scene theme for annual Farmers Formal

Students will walk up a path covered with fall leaves into a harvest scene at the annual Farmer's Formal slated for Saturday night in the ag activities building.

Norma Jean Campbell and Don Steel, heading the decorations committee, announced that pumpkins and corn stalks will be placed around the edge of the floor. From one corner a big harvest moon will shine on the whole scene. A flight of geese across the blue crepe ceiling will be an outstanding novelty feature of the evening.

Cider is to be served from a barrel. Betty Jean Spalding heads the refreshments committee.

Dean Hosp talks to frosh women

Dean of Women Helen Hosp will speak to freshman women at the freshman AWS meeting today at 5 p. m. in Ellen Smith hall. Her talk will be an informal discussion of the handbook to be put out next year. Accounts of experiences of entering college, questions, and suggestions will be welcomed.

Tess Cassady will speak explaining the activities of WAA. A parliamentary skit on "Robert's Rules of Order," with Marie Christensen in charge, will be presented to acquaint the women with the proper procedure for conducting a meeting.

College men tell women...

How to be good at man-catching

Coeds—do you want to know how to get your man?

College men can tell you, or at least they can give their opinions as they did in the questionnaire given out recently by WSGA.

The average girl lacks brains, 75 percent of the men said. Fifteen percent said she lacks personality and 10 percent were of the opinion that conversational ability is missing.

In order to be successful at man-catching, a girl must, according to the men:

1. Raise her mental standards.
2. Improve her conversation.
3. Smoke and drink less.
4. Dress simply.
5. Above all, do these things naturally.

In addition to presenting this five-point program for getting the man, the men answered a number of questions on the Ideal Girl.

"Do you like girls to accompany you in smoking and drinking?" was one of the questions put to them.

"There's nothing more objectionable than a drunken girl," was the opinion. The majority of the comments were not so strongly against smoking as against drinking.

Opinions on the girl who asks a man to parties when he has never dated her were divided evenly.

"How much do you like girls to talk?" brought forth the answer "as long as she has something interesting to say." Small talk—not the silly kind—men emphasized as a very important part of conversational charm.

Men advised girls to read the sports page.

Forbidden topics of conversation, as far as the men are concerned, are clothes and the girl's other dates.

Switching the subject from the girl to the man, the questionnaire asked if he would ask the girl to go on the streetcar if his car broke down half an hour before time to go out.

Most of the boys said, "NO YOU CAN'T PARK A STREET CAR."

In considering the relative merits of dancing and conversational ability, 97 percent of the men asserted that conversational ability is much more essential.

Naturalness and sincerity were almost unanimously the qualities the men admired most.

"Wear dark lipstick on the campus, but not while having your picture taken," emphasized Mr. Townsend in giving advice to sorority girls who are soon to be photographed for the Cornhusker.

"Light red lipstick is preferable to the other, which photographs so very dark that the lines of the mouth are extenuated and the lips appear heavy," continued Townsend, who is owner of the studio where sorority and fraternity pictures are to be taken.

Very little rouge should be used, and the hair should be fixed as you naturally wear it. Hair photographs more beautifully when you do not come direct from the beauty salon," he said.

This year the sororities and fraternities have been divided into groups, each of which are supposed to have their pictures taken within a specified two weeks. If the houses cooperate with the Cornhusker staff it will greatly facilitate and simplify the work, and will also avoid the rush that usually comes near the deadlines for sittings.

Being plastered and being drunk not same at Rag

Dear Readers:

Boy, were we plastered in the NEBRASKAN office yesterday.

The whole place was a mess. And one guy was the cause of it all. The layman always thinks of a newspaper office as a congregation of screwballs, and often wonders how the paper ever comes out.

But he wouldn't suspect that being plastered was a prerequisite to being a newsman. One might think that being a newspaperman would be excuse enough to be plastered, but you wouldn't necessarily be a newspaperman because you were plastered.

Incidentally, the plaster was on the ceiling and a union man was applying it deftly. We didn't touch a drop.

Casady presents plaque to Thetas

At a mass meeting of the AAW Oct. 9, Hortense Casady, president, presented Kappa Alpha Theta with the intramural plaque won by that sorority in the 1939-40 intramural season. Delta Gamma, who won the plaque last year, placed second.
