New year-new style

Yesterday, the first edition of new Awgwan Flash went on sale. Reorganized, style changed entirely, manned by a new editorial staff, advised by Sigma Delta Chi, the "baby" has been delivered after a summer and five weeks of planning, worrying, and hard work.

Comments gathered from students who bought copies vary from lavish praise to utter disappointment. When the magazine has made the rounds, the general opinion will be pretty plain and the editors and managers of the new magazine will know the work they have done has been either good or bad.

From the standpoint of something new, something different, the Flash is a complete success. Like many things many of us do, the first attempt falls short of what we would like to have done. The Awgwan Flash falls short of what its editors and managers would like to have done.

But the magazine is new. It is not to be judged entirely upon its first appearance. There are nine more issues left during the school year, and something tells us that the second issue will be much better than the first and so on.

Editing a picture magazine is no joke and no easy task. Layout of photography is a difficult task. Arrangements to please the eye are difficult to find.

Whether copy should be used under pictures is a tough question to answer. The reaction to its use and to its absence is the only way to measure the popularity of either style... and so the Awgwan editor included both styles, hoping that the reaction would aid in establishing a policy and a future style.

This university is large enough to support a good humor or picture magazine. We think the revamped Awgwan Flash, despite obvious temporary weak points, is worth considering and worth buying. Its editors, managers, and those members of Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalism honorary, who have worked long and hard on the reorganization have congratulations in store for them... not yet, but after the next edition.

November's magazine should rank with the best college magazines in the country. The steepest hill is behind and the road ahead should be smooth. Let's hope the drivers of the automobile don't fall asleep at the wheel.

Migration-

Dance as dance can. Dance at the Union that evening gave Huskers a new outlook on social life. Cutting is the thing there. And it is something strange for us to take a date to the dance and not see her again that evening. Highlight of the dance was the hour rug cutting session starring two of Nebraska's first string football men whose solos might even top their performance on the gridiron.

The train dragged out of the station at midnight after everyone dragged out to the train.

It was a 24 hour party and people were tired. The last "Stand" made their last stand about 2:30 a. m. when they hoarsed out the words of "There Is No Place Like Nebraska" accompanied by utterings that resembled the music to same song. Then by popular request they reverted from their attempt at "spirit" and like almost everyone else, went to sleep in a heap in the first empty seat.

A short distance out of Lawrence, a stowaway crawled up the aisle, asked which way the conductor went, chuckled when he found out that he and the trainmen were headed in different directions, then crawled up on the baggage rack to hide. The conductor came back. As he was passing the stowaway coughed. The conductor shined his light up on the baggage rack, remarked that the suitcase up there needed some cough medicine, and then walked on.

Night life.

Along the aisle about 4 a. m., crept a porter, dark as the train itself, selling what he called "scrumptious sandwiches." He stopped by a seat which held a body and said to that body, "Sandwich, son." The body turned over, lit a match so it could see in the dark and asked, "What kind?" "Ham, sir, and just look at dat thick slice o' meat." The body looked at it, said, "Yah, I know, let a veterinarian go to work on it for ten minutes and it would get up and walk." The body turned over and went dead again. The porter crept on.

It's a long way to Tipperary. And it's just about as far to Lawrence. Thank the Greek gods that a migration doesn't happen every weekend. We are no longer jealous of those birds who go south every winter.
