

Nebraska women figure among Ak-Sar-Ben Ball countesses

Highlight of the Omaha social season will come Saturday evening when the king and queen of Ak-Sar-Ben are presented at the annual Coronation Ball in the Ak-Sar-Ben coliseum.

Interest in the ball, which has taken place every October for about 30 years except during the World War, is aroused in Lincoln and over the state because members of the court come from all parts of the state. Many attend the university.

Identities of the king and queen and the method of presentation are kept secret until the night of the ball, which was modeled on the New Orleans Mardi Gras but which has now gained fame in its own right.

Nine of the countesses, whose identities were revealed several weeks ago, are university students. They are Yvonne Costello, Marian Dooley, Margaret Gilbraith, Katherine Horner, Mary Jean Knorr, Mickey Morrow, Barbara Stout, Shirley Woods and Molly Woodward. All the countesses are outstate girls.

Four from Omaha.

Among the princesses, announced last Sunday, are these four Omaha girls who attend the university: Alice Ann Hascall, Joan Metcalf, Ann Thomas and Catherine Tunison.

A large contingent of Lincoln people and university students is expected to attend the gala ball Saturday.

Teachers get DAILY

In order that the teachers who are attending the State Teachers convention may get a bird's-eye view of life on the University of Nebraska campus, the DAILY is distributing a large number of copies free today in the coliseum where the convention holds forth.

Tap dancers meet

Jean Cowden, leader of the tap dancing class, announces that the first meeting is to be held tonight at 7 in room 315 at the Union. This meeting will be for organization. Harriet Talbot is the Co-ed Counselor sponsor. All women students are invited.

Police--

(Continued from page 1.) functions of the FBI. He said that unlike the secret police of Europe, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is a bulwark for democracy and liberty. Hendon has been with this group for seven years and is now in charge of the crime records division in Washington, D. C.

War on "columnists." "Latest declaration of war by the FBI has been waged against the so-called fifth columnists," Hendon stated. "To combat saboteurs, espionage and subversive agents, the Bureau is expanding its personnel and training program and maintaining close co-operation with military and naval intelligence services."

He described a current plant survey program covering 1,000 industrial establishments furnishing vital materials to the U. S. government. Such plants are being carefully studied by the FBI to the end of increasing their protective facilities, he explained.

"Citizens can best help by reporting all cases of subversive activity to the FBI and then forget about them," he stated. Leave the work to those especially trained to do it and avoid the disastrous consequences of amateur sleuthing and private vigilante activities.

According to Hendon, problems of the Bureau change. In 1908 when the Bureau was organized, crime was generally an individual sort of thing and the criminal was speedily apprehended and punished in the same community in which the crime was committed.
