

Innocents test student opinion on parking proposal

To sound out opinion on the proposal calling for a system of stickers for student cars in order to alleviate the campus parking problem, petitions are being distributed today by the Innocents' society, DAILY staff members, Barb Union, and fifty unaffiliated students. Innocents urge all those in favor of making the change to sign.

With the parking situation becoming more and more acute since parking meters in the downtown area have caused Lincoln shoppers and businessmen to park their cars on and near the campus thus congesting the university parking, the system will entail the issuing of stickers at a maximum cost of ten cents to all students driving cars. These stickers will allow students to park their cars anywhere on the campus other than those areas set aside for the faculty. Cars without stickers will first be given warning tickets and then tickets carrying a fine.

Uni regulation.
The university, thru its power to regulate university grounds, also has the power to regulate and restrict parking as it sees fit. This power has been vested in the In-nocents in order that they may attempt to clear up the parking congestion problem.

Investigation on the part of the campus police force has revealed, according to Sergeant Regier, that a great number of cars which belong in downtown parking areas are parked on the campus. According to Bob Aden, president of Innocents, if the plan of student stickers is put into force, faculty members will be given tickets for parking in areas other than those set aside for them.

The petition:
The petition as it reads is:

Conscious of the serious parking problem on the campus, accentuated of late by the installation of parking meters downtown, the effect of which is to force business men to park their cars in the university area and thereby to deprive the students of the use of needed parking stalls, the Innocents Society proposes:

1. That all cars operated regularly by students be tagged by a university sticker at a small expense. (not over 10 cents)

2 That in accordance with the power vested in the university, parking on the north side of R street (10th to 14th), the west side of 14th and both sides of 12th street north of R to Vine, be restricted for cars bearing the prescribed stickers.

3. That the campus police give tickets to all other cars found in this area. (The police have agreed to co-operate in this respect)

4. That the south side of R street be made a two hour parking zone.

We the undersigned do hereby endorse the above proposal:

(A check mark indicates that the signer drives his own car).

Five architect seniors' project enters contest

Plans for a consul's residence and office, one of the architectural problems sent out by the Beaux-Arts Institute of Design in New York City, will be sent by the architecture department to New York today for participation in a national competition.

Five seniors have been working on the project. They are Richard O. Freeman, Burket E. Graf, Paul Rader, Paul R. Reddy and David Wink. The plans will undergo a local judgment first in which about three of the sets of plans will be chosen to be submitted to the Beaux-Arts Institute.

Mr. L. B. Smith, head of the Architecture department, stated that, on the problem, a new method has been employed. First, a small scale drawing of the plans was made, showing the residence and office buildings and surroundings gardens. This was transferred to a slide and then projected onto a very large paper and the plans traced in.

The architecture courses will follow quite closely the program sent out by the Beaux-Arts Institute and will include a large number of their projects. The next one to be worked on centers around plans for a plane base in the Pacific.

Law seniors will sport canes Tradition neglected of late

Law college senior class will revive their old custom of carrying canes this year, Bill Redmond, president, announced yesterday. An old tradition, it has been neglected for several years.

The canes are hickory, and a natural tap color, Redmond said. Tradition has it that they are to be carried on the campus at all times.

New directory appears today

Book features revised organized group listings

Current edition of the student directory, containing names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all students enrolled and faculty members working at the university, will go on sale this morning according to a statement made yesterday by editor Dick Allgood.

This year's book will have no supplementary list of late registrants. Names of these students have been included in the regular list. Revised fraternity, sorority, and cooperative house lists as well as the school songs and yells are included in this year's edition.

To carry telephone numbers.

In addition, the book will carry all numbers in the university telephone exchange, and an accurate classification of religious workers connected with the university.

Publication of the directory is sponsored by the university YMCA, and is supervised by C. D. Hayes, general secretary. Burton Thiel, business manager of the book, said that copies would be available at Regents' Book store, Longs, the Co-op, and Graves Printing company. Copies will be on sale for the next few days in university buildings.

Studio Theatre gives year's first program tonight

A quadruple feature with three curtain acts thrown in will be included in the first presentation this year of the Studio Theatre tonight at 7 at the Temple Theatre.

On the program are four plays with the following student directors: Dorothy Ward, Mildred Manning, Constance Hourigan and Maribel Hitchcock.

Directors of the 3 curtain acts are Martha Reed, Sylvia Lotman and the team of Betty Meyer and Ann Arbitman.

There will be no admission charge, speech department heads announced.

Hoover speaks here tomorrow

Herbert Hoover, former president, will broadcast his address before a state-wide republican rally over a nation-wide hook-up Thursday night, Oct. 31, from the university coliseum.

Hoover's speech is one of the three he is making in this present presidential campaign—one on the east coast, one on the west coast, and one here in Lincoln. Mr. Hoover requested that he make his mid-western speech in Lincoln.

Local broadcast of Hoover's speech will be handled thru NBC over KMA, Shenandoah, and KOWH, Omaha from 8 p. m. until 8:45 p. m.

Male population decides when it comes to coeds figures don't lie

By Paul E. Svoboda.

Male collegians are very conscious of women. Conscious of their personalities, their shapes, their sizes, their faces. As one bright wag put it, "Figures don't lie."

Today your inquiring reporter of last year sallied forth to discover from Husker students what their preference was in a woman—Cleopatra figure or a beautiful face. Here is what a few of them think:

Stan Maly, bizad freshman: I'll take form over face. It's the first

Coll-Agri skits due in today

Barb paper hits stands

Unaffiliates' weekly publication is free

First edition of the "Barb," official campus bulletin for unaffiliated students, was placed on the stands today for free distribution. Copies were delivered last night to members of the various barb clubs.

The new paper, recently approved and subsidized by the publications board, is a four page, 9 by 12 inch illustrated, lithographed bulletin. The first edition is devoted to announcements and reviews of the barb activities on the campus.

Innovation in the new paper is a full page of photographs of unaffiliated students in the news. Other features include a barb personalities column, a sports column listing intra-mural results, and a calendar of events concerning barb activities.

The opening edition of the publication is dedicated to Arthur James Henrikson, Barb president, 1939-1940.

Awgwan sales top last year's

Circulation of the first Awgwan Flash jumped 275 copies over the first Awgwan of last year, according to an announcement of the unofficial figures made by Gerald Spahn, business manager.

Subscriptions predominated in this year's total circulation of 1,050. However, news stand sales almost doubled that of last year, Spahn said.

The Corn Cobs, who aided in the initial circulation drive, will not work on sales hereafter, Spahn, also president of the Corn-Cobs, announced.

Speech juniors stage shows Satire, comedy scheduled

Juniors in the department of speech will present three dramatic sketches, directed, staged, and enacted by students without faculty supervision, in the Union ballroom Saturday at 8 p. m.

First play on the program is "Twenty Years Later," a satire on the meeting of a group of college women 20 years after graduation. The second sketch, "Just Off Piccadilly," is the story of a psychic research student who meets a ghost. Concluding the program will be "There's Money Coming to You," a fast moving comedy about a criminal who combines fortune-telling with second-story work.

Student directors for the plays are Libby Biaskovec, Virginia Thede, and Evelyn Elias. Property and stage manager for the shows will be Romulo Soldevilla.

The Union will sponsor three such shows this year presented by the department of speech. The last show will feature plays written by Nebraska students and presented for the first time to the campus.
