I'd much rather campaign for someone else, it's easier---Hoover

By Ralph S. Combs.
(ABOARD THE HOOVER SPECIAL ENROUTE TO LINCOLN.)
He looks tired—this 67 year old man who was the last republican president. Work has left service stripes of wrinkles on his chubby face. But he said he wasn't tired. It's much better this way, former President Herbert Hoover smiled. "I'd rather be campaigning for somebody else than for myself—it's much easier; you do your bit, and then quit."

Same old line
He half-smiled as he remarked that the democrats were using the same propaganda tactics on Willie as they used on him in 1932. "When I was up for re-election they dubbed me an Englishman—for an Englishman was an unpopular type at that time. Now they call Willie a German because Germans are unpopular."

No, we won't carry California, he opined. The state is over-run with share-croppers from the southwestern states who are mostly on WPA or relief rolls. We can't win over votes like those. But if we do carry California, it will be
