Did you know . . .

it might become. It is not impossible, because, for one thing, the DAILY NEBRASKAN is going to let you know the answers to these questions.

Before going into the thick of thousands of facts and figures, we want your promise that you will take a sincere interest in what happens to this school. Without your interest, a lack of which would indicate that you care nothing about what you yourself would reap in benefits from a better school . . . without that moral cooperation, the campaign for a better university and retention of an enviable position in American education will collapse; for if students do not care about the school they attend, those who guide its destinies and make possible its improvements will not give the help within their power.

Nebraska has slipped and is in danger of being dropped from the list of members in the Association of American Universities. In other words, we are in danger of becoming a second rate school unless we receive the appropriation the Chancellor and the regents are requesting from the legislature. And the legislature certainly won't feel much like granting anything if they find the student body indolent, unobservant, and uninformed as to the needs and functions of the university.

Every man counts. Inform yourselves, know what's going on! What delight any person derives from going around with his head empty and lighter-than-air, we don't know. Certainly our own selfish interests should be enough to make us know our own school.

2) Defeat of the British would be of serious consequence to the United States for: a friendly British fleet would no longer dominate the Atlantic; totalitarian states would have unquestioned hegemony over Europe and Africa; American foreign trade probably could not compete with a nazi dominated Europe; the United States would be the only powerful democracy in an aggressive, authoritarian world; and, until our ordered arms materialize (1942-46) we need to keep the English going to forestall a threat to us.

Opponents say that the English can pay for what they need, that they can probably win the war without our industrial products, that it is not a serious matter to us if they do lose.

Silver anniversary

A strange anniversary was celebrated in New York yesterday, as survivors of Henry Ford's ill-fated peace ship, the Oscar II, got together in memory of the 1915 mission "to get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." Members of the group included such writers and commentators as Elmer Davis, Berton Braley and Irving Caesar.

Paging Mr. Dies

Educational circles in New York once again are seething with reports of subversive activity in the city's schools, as charges of communism were levied against members of the faculty of Brooklyn college.

War worries uni library

Censorship stops publications

Foreign periodicals have become an international problem since the outbreak of the Anglo-German war, according to Miss Maude Wisherd, in charge of the order department of the main library. Publications arriving from Germany, Italy, and The Netherlands travel over half way around the world—by way of Siberia and Japan to reach this country.

The library receives a total of 2,413 publications in its periodicals department, which is under the direction of Mrs. Margaret R. Smith. These magazines range geographically from such widely scattered nations as Russia, Canada, Italy, Mexico, Germany, Spain, England, The Netherlands, and various universities throughout the United States.

Some never arrive.

Since the outbreak of the war, however, to obtain many of these publications it has been very difficult with many of them failing of the college, testified before a legislative committee investigating the school system that the communist party was deliberately using the free colleges of New York as a sounding board for its own activities. An assistant professor at the college testified that he and four others of the faculty had joined the party under assumed names. The committee promises a full investigation.

household, contrives to foil her father's plans. The resulting conflict between father, daughter, and maid is the essence of the story.

As in all farce comedies, the ending is a happy one, but rather unexpected in this instance. The play moves at a fast pace, with broad and exaggerated portrayal of character types.

What kind of Math do you call this?

It sounds crazy—but let's see how it would be perfectly possible in the telephone business. Suppose an improved method is devised that clips just one second from the time required to handle one toll ticket in the accounting department. Apply this method throughout the Bell System—handling an average of some 55,000,000 toll tickets each month—and it would effect a monthly saving of nearly 1 1/4 years!

A second saved here, an unnecessary step cut out there—on such close attention to "little" things rests the Bell System's ability to provide the finest, fastest, cheapest telephone service in the world.

Why not telephone home often? Long Distance rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.
