at the 21 to 36 year age limits. It is to be expected, therefore, that congressional debates will get down to "brass tacks," if an effort is made to improve upon earlier efforts.

The central problem touched off by the Legion proposal arises from a divergence of opinion concerning the actual defense needs of the nation. The existing conscription law—based on actual war time plans of the war department—seeks to produce a huge army in the shortest time possible. Ostensibly, the Legion plan is to build up a "permanent" stock of trained men to be subject to call whenever a crisis should develop—in six months or in ten years.

Considerable impetus for the substitute legislation has originated in the belated realization that either the sending of another AEF to Europe or the mobilization of a large home defense force to check a possible invasion of the western hemisphere has for the present become extremely remote.

Testing—Intended to prepare for civil service examinations and governmental positions in the inspection and testing of materials and for similar positions in national defense industries. Admission requirements provide three years of an engineering college curriculum, including the subject of Mechanics of Materials or the equivalent. A daytime course of 15 weeks' duration, it will comprise study of physical properties of materials and testing in the laboratory, study of government specifications for materials and of problems encountered in their inspection, lectures on metallurgy of commercial metals and their alloys, and study of measuring gauges as used in mass production. Students will be required to purchase certain textbooks.

3. Drafting—An evening course for men employed during the daytime. Objective is to give students the first half of preparation for minor positions in drafting. Students will spend three hours per evening for four evenings per week for 15 weeks, and admission requirements provide for American citizens, high school graduates, at least 18 years of age, and of sound physical health. Students will furnish their own drawing equipment, but paper will be supplied free.

Turnpike plans early dancing on Sunday nights

Does Sunday night leave you in a quandary wondering what to do on a date?

The Turnpike may be the solution. Beginning Sunday dancing will begin at 6:30 p. m. followed by five and one-half hours of continuous dancing. If this plan suits university students it will be continued.

Dick Barrie and his orchestra will inaugurate this new idea when they appear Sunday. Formerly with Kay Kyser, Barrie now has his own orchestra and has appeared all over the country. He does much of his own arranging.

Admission to Sunday dances will be 30c before 8 p. m. so that students may attend without too much strain on the bank roll. After 8 p. m. 45 cents will be charged.

Students under the jurisdiction of the Junior Division have had their pre-registration conferences. Their "application for registration" forms have been filled out and are in their advisors' offices. Students should call for them there. These forms should be taken to the assignment committee in the Temple and then brought to the Junior Division office. Beginning Jan. 24 students should call at the Registrar's office for a statement of fees. These fees are to be paid at the finance office.

A students take the "application" forms to the college activities building to be validated by the dean's signature.
