This time it's a new call for support of a Nebraska athletic venture.

The Husker basketball team has been decidedly placed in a back seat with all the Rose Bowl talk, but the cage season is in full swing and demands the respect and support of Husker students and fans.

Nebraska's cagers didn't have such an impressive record in the non-conference battles but the opponents were in a class by themselves—some of the best in the nation.

Kansas State fell by the wayside last week in the first Big Six clash this year and Husker hopes have been soaring since.

Now the basketball team has done alright by itself thus far in the conference and it's up to the students to do their part—spur the basketballers on to even greater cage triumphs this season.

Oklahoma plays the Huskers on the coliseum floor Monday night.

The Sooner "Boy Scouts" are gone but Coach Drake's present crop is said to be above the 1938-40 par which was so good.

The Sooners will be the top-heavy favorites in tomorrow night's game but let's give the team some support like you gave the footballers and the Huskers may be sent to unexpected glories in the basketball.

How about it now? Let's give the Sooners a verbal battle from the stands—not only from the maples.

Sidelight from the highlights of the Rose Bowl game:

Stan Graff, Stanford's all-conference end, came up with a few choice lines in the Pasadena classic. After the Huskers made their first touchdown right off the bat, Graff directed these words at all Huskers in general:

"Now you're going to be sorry. You've gone and made us mad." Graff and his mates just weren't fooling, eh?

The nation's bowling center might just as well be in Los Angeles. The Hollywood alleys on Sunset boulevard are 52 in number and are sound proof. Electric scoreboards which flash scoring marks on a screen add brilliance to the layout.

Add note: Let's cage the Sooner basketballers Monday night.

Husker cagers face Sooners Monday night

Facing the strong Oklahoma Sooner quintet, Nebraska's basketball team will be the underdog when these two fives get together for battle on the coliseum floor, Monday night at 8 p. m.

The Sooners are slated to be on top or next in line for the conference cage race now that they bumped off the highly favored University of Kansas five last week by 11 points.

However, the Huskers made an impressive second half showing against Kansas State last Tuesday night in their first 1941 league start.

Lineup undecided.

Coach A. J. Lewandowski's starting lineup for tomorrow night is as yet undecided but Sid Held and Don Fitz, lettermen guards, are sure of positions. Al Randall will probably get the starting call at the center post.

The forward slots will be filled by either Sophomores John Thompson and John Fitzgibbon or Junior Les Livingston. In reserve will be Max Young, Hartmann Goetze, John Hay and Lyle King for further action.

Ford is star.

The Sooners are built around Hugh Ford, 6-6 inch center. Forwards Dale Carlile and Garnett Corbin are juniors but are plenty classy. Matt Zollner, another letterman, is held in reserve for the front line.

Lettermen Guards Billy Richards and Bill Bentley have been crowded out of the starting lineup by Sophomores Paul Heap and Allie Paine. Around this team, Coach Bruce Drake has moulded an outfit that has all the experts guessing which may end at the top of the heap when the final whistle blows in March.

College will give four play awards

Three $25 and one $75 award will be given by Pomona College in its second annual one-act playwriting competition, open to any person enrolled in a college, university, junior college, or undergraduate drama school.

The best comedy, tragedy and social drama will each win $25, and the author of the best of these three will also receive an added $75. This $100 grand prize is the Robert Taylor Award, established by the screen star, who graduated from Pomona College in 1933. Further details may be found in the DAILY NEBRASKAN office.

Warren Alfson . . . Prefers more normal work than cinema

A few days ago there were words printed to the effect that Husker footballer Warren Alfson was considering strongly a screen career.

That is not entirely correct. Alfson, Nebraska's All-American guard, could have a chance for a screen test but the results are undeterminable.

Therefore, Alfson wants it plainly known that he would rather seek a job in some other field, preferably business, where the future is more clear and distinct on the horizon.

Littler stays at home for study from Boston race

Eugene "Red" Littler, the Mitchell Mercury Man, declined from competing in the annual Veteran of Foreign Wars track meet that was held in the Boston Garden Saturday night.

Littler was to have ran in the special 600-yard dash, but gave his excuse for declining as his need for study for the approaching semester examinations.

The junior redhead could have had his trip via air and all expenses paid. Littler's next appearance will be in the Illinois relays.

Davis Hall wins barb volleyball

Davis Hall won the Barb volleyball championship Wednesday night by outlasting the Dark Horse sextet. Scores were 15-11, 10-15, and 15-13. Davis Spikers had reached the finals with a 15-11, 15-8 win over Baldwin Hall earlier. Dark Horse measured Casino Club 15-11, 15-12 to gain their place in the finals.

Fine defensive play featured the final as neither team could produce a consistent offensive, and the score was tied several times before the victors finally mustered the two consecutive points necessary for the conquest.

After Mary has pleaded her case, she leaves the court and waits downstairs while the court discusses the various angles of the problem, and weighs the penalty to be imposed.

It isn't so bad

For her negligent observation of the rules, Mary is "campused." She can't go out nights for two weeks. The court notifies her house of the penalty imposed, and her housemother or her sorority president must see that she conforms to the ruling handed down by the court.
