By those in the engine college, law college and ag college, for papers would be made available to them in their respective buildings. With universal subscription the points of distribution could be multiplied indefinitely, without the fear of giving papers to non-subscribers.

All in all there are advantages for everyone. Remember your endorsement is only giving the plan a trial. The ultimate decision on it will come only after a year's operation, and at the hands of the student themselves.

We jumped the gun

When the NEBRASKAN announced that the Barb Union had endorsed the Student Council subscription plan, we misrepresented the facts. Our own enthusiasm carried us so far that our staff interpreted a decidedly favorable vote of a special Barb Union meeting as being representative of the entire group. This, we are informed, was a mistake.

The action of that group was only tentative awaiting the final endorsement or rejection of the entire Barb Union meeting this evening. Lets hope that our blunder won't support from the Student Council plan, which is aimed not necessarily at helping this staff, but at helping the entire student body thru a wider distribution of the paper.

Commentorial

... from our readers

Dear Editor:

In Re: Automatic Subscription.

Yesterday's announcement that the Barb Union had approved the DAILY'S subscription plan came as a distinct surprise to a great many people, including the officers and members of the Barb Union. Certainly from past experience with DAILY editorial policy and news coverage, Barbs had no reason to favor the plan. Therefore, the action of the special meeting of the Barb Union Thursday night needs a few words of explanation.

The approval voiced was that of the individual members present, and was not and could not be an endorsement by the Barb Union. The group was not representative of the entire Union, nor had it authority to act. Any official action can only come at the open Barb Union meeting tonight, and all Barbs are urged to attend this meeting.

It is true that an overwhelming majority of Barbs present at Thursday's meeting were personally in favor of the plan. They were willing to put party differences aside and consider the suggestion on its merits. All agreed that it would be a good thing for the university to have a paper that would be read by all students, and that the DAILY could be greatly improved by the automatic subscription proposal.

In Re: The Barb.

A great number of students have been asking what has become of the Barb. As was announced in the last issue of the paper last semester, a subscription drive to support the paper was to begin at the first of the semester. However, upon the protest of the DAILY the drive was delayed three weeks by hearings before the Board of Publications. At that time members of the staff renewed their requests for permission to finance the paper through the sale of advertising, so that they might continue the policy of distributing the paper free to everyone. The Publications Board denied both The Barb's request for advertising, and the DAILY'S request that The Barb be suspended. Permission was

(To be sung to the accompaniment of a mouth spray and two zithers.)

I stagger through life with a smirk on my face,
With a sneer wrinkling up my schnozzola;
I act debonair with a bored, detached air
And swill nothing but old Coco Cola;
I think nothing of dancing with Rogers
Or prancing on horses that leap like Beelsebub,
And shouting "huzza!" "tally ho!" and "hot cha."
At the home runs of either a Sox or a Cub,
I'll hack off a corn with a look of sheer scorn
From the base of my foot, metatarsical,
And stand in the lobby (a thespian hobby)
At plays, whether tragic or farcical.
I look rather frowsy, magna cum lousy
I pursue the muses at college,
With much hesitation and some procrastination
I gormandize pre-distilled knowledge.
My simian features remind several creatures
Of Ceasar's division of Gaul;
My smile on a photo is tortured,
In toto, I'm not photogenic at all.

granted to begin the subscription drive. But the semester was by that time so far advanced that there did not appear to be time to organize a subscription drive and still have enough issues to give the subscribers their money's worth.

Independence day?

Monday was the Bulgarian Independence day. Preceding this year's celebration of the anniversary was Sunday's meeting of the Bulgarian parliament—a meeting called by order of the premier to ratify the signing of the protocol which formally attached that little state to the Axis entourage.

As a result, in this year's celebration the Bulgarian flag was overshadowed by the everywhere-present German swastika.

Before the ink was dry on the document the German army was pouring into Bulgaria by panzer division and transport plane, and, the Associated Press reported, as darkness fell Saturday the mechanized columns were still thundering down the streets of the capital and huge Junker transport planes were coming down methodically on the Sofia airdrome, packed with troops.

The peaceful occupation of Bulgaria is an important victory for the Germans. It means they quickly can assemble an overpowering military force on the Greek border. In general, it makes it easier for Hitler to carry out his program of complete domination of southeastern Europe.

It is probable that the Germans will attempt to force the Greeks to make peace with Italy. That would eliminate the difficulty of fighting a war on two fronts, and seriously hamper English action in the Balkans.

Decision by the Greeks on continuing the war likely will depend on Turkey. If the English and the Turks provide support, the conquest of Greece will be a difficult matter. The mountainous terrain is a nasty obstacle even to the German panzer divisions, and the English as well as the Turks can move in across the British-controlled sea lanes.

If Hitler is convinced that the British and the Turks are going to combine to give the Greeks effective aid he probably will not precipitate action in that area for the time being, but will concentrate on smashing England in England, and not in the Mediterranean.

If England falls, Greece and Turkey will be easy meat.

Debate student picture deadline is at noon today

All students who have taken part in university debate this year, including the winner of the Long debate trophy, are asked to come to the campus studio at noon for the taking of a class picture to appear in the Cornhusker, L. A. White, debate coach announced yesterday.

White also announced the names of two new entrants in intra-mural debate. Sigma Alpha Mu entered a team in the interfraternity competition, while the first barb team to enter into competition also filed. Robert Dewey and Robert Schaufolberger entered as the "Gauls." White is calling for more barb teams to compete with the Gauls.
