

Luckey tells collegians in convo address of war trends in America

Denouncing the mounting national debt and the "drift toward war," former Congressman Henry C. Luckey, in his address yesterday afternoon at an ag college convocation, warned that the American people are about to commit suicide.

"If we get in this war—and we're already in it—you boys will be in the front line trenches, and you, your children and your children's children will ultimately have to pay the debt," he declared.

Clean up here, first.

Arguing that the United States should clean up her own backyard before trying to set the whole world in order, Luckey listed crime, highway deaths, continued surplus and want as domestic problems still to be solved.

"Our first duty is to show that democracy will work in our own country," he said. "These problems are above party. They cannot be solved by political bias and ballyhoo."

Free own people.

Asserting that President Roosevelt had announced the goal of helping to establish freedom of speech, of press and of worship from want throughout the world, Luckey declared that this nation has been trying to free its own people from want for the last ten years and has not yet succeeded.

It was wholly unnecessary for the United States to have fought the Spanish American war, said Luckey, who has made an extensive study of the roots of war, "which reach far back into history."

America to feed Europeans?

AWS judges Best Dressed Girls tonight

Final tryouts for the selection of the Best Dressed Girl on the campus will be held in Ellen Smith tonight at 7. Candidates are instructed to wear campus clothes.

Presentation of the Best Dressed Girl is the climax of the annual all girls' show, the Coed Follies, which will be given in the Temple theater next Thursday.

There have already been several reviews of the BDG candidates in different costumes—date dresses and formals—starting with Royer's judging several weeks ago.

AWS sponsors the Follies, under the chairmanship of Dorothy White, and board members will select the BDG.

Roundtable group to discuss question next Friday in Union ... led by Prof. Gray

The war is on! With Dr. G. W. Gray, man-of-the-hour student on European affairs, keeping the discussion organized, the camps opposing one another on the question of whether America should feed the starving peoples of Europe will wage an oral battle in the faculty lounge next Friday afternoon at 4 p. m. The occasion is the third student roundtable of the year, sponsored jointly by the DAILY NEBRASKAN and Student Union.

Flight board to interview UN students

Examining group arrives tomorrow; to sponsor film on cadet's life

For all students interested in becoming pilots or navigators, a government examining board will be on this campus all day tomorrow to interview any applicants. They will be in Nebraska hall, room 7.

When the board was here before there were so many applicants that it was impossible to interview everyone. The board will give physical examinations. A motion picture on the life of a flying cadet will be shown this afternoon at 5 p. m. in Nebraska hall, room 110.

If a student is accepted following stiff scholastic and physical tests, he is admitted to training as a flying cadet. If he passes the basic course he is eligible for a reserve officer's commission and may advance as an officer in the regular army.

Fullbrook finds wholesaling trend in Nebraska is up

Wholesaling in Nebraska is on the uptrend, according to an analysis by E. S. Fullbrook, professor of marketing which appears in the current Nebraska Business Review.

Basic data on wholesaling for 1939, used by Fullbrook, has just been released by the Census Bureau. Total sales volume was 19 percent over 1935 (the last preceding census date), while service and limited function wholesalers, or "wholesalers proper," reported gains of 19 percent. The total number of establishments increased 9 percent in the four years, the number of employees gained 11 percent, while the total pay roll was up 17 percent.

Universal subscription to go on spring ballot ... for student okay

Five weeks from now students go to the polls. And among other questions on their ballots these students will be expected to vote either for or against universal subscription to the DAILY NEBRASKAN. This question has been presented to the students through the NEBRASKAN and in the form of petitions distributed by the Student Council. But as is the case with all proposals for change many prejudices have arisen, and many would like to know more about what can be guaranteed them, and how much the proposed plan would actually cost.

Burton Thiel, chairman of the Student Council committee, urges anyone wishing information about the plan to turn in questions to his committee or to the DAILY office. These questions will then be answered every day in the NEBRASKAN and in a special question-answer publication which Thiel's committee is preparing.

Patterson to speak in three Indiana cities

Dr. Charles H. Patterson, of the philosophy department, will speak in three Indiana cities March 24-29, on the school of philosophy program for agricultural workers sponsored by the bureau of agricultural economics of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Prairie Schooner editor . . . Wimberly speaks on radio show

Dr. L. C. Wimberly, professor of English and editor of the Prairie Schooner, will be interviewed this afternoon at 5:15 over KPOR on the university's regular weekly book newscast. Wimberly is a member of the radio activities committee which helped inaugurate the program.

Frank Egan, assistant university reference librarian and commentator on the program, will question Dr. Wimberly regarding the history of the Schooner and the part it has played in the development of Nebraska writers.

Many authors contribute.

Many famous authors from all parts of the country have contributed articles for the Schooner, published by the university and considered among the country's foremost literary quarterlies.

The book broadcast, inaugurated a few weeks ago and believed to be the only one of its kind on the air, regularly features news of books and writers. A special feature of the program is the awarding each week of a new book as a prize to the listener sending in the most interesting question for discussion by the commentator.

Union will give dancers flowers

Free gardenias will be given to the first 100 girls attending the "Welcome Sweet Springtime" dance given in the Union ballroom tonight from 9 to 12.

Johnny Cox and his orchestra will play for the dance. Admission is ten cents a person.

Defending the Hoover and other programs for setting up relief commissions where they are needed will be Ralph Schroeder and Lowell Johnson, chairman and associate respectively of the Nebraska branch of the Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, and Currin Shields, senior honor student in political science.

Defend England

The negative side, which will defend England's stand, will be supported by James Olson and Rolf Ordal, graduate students in history and DAILY news commentators, and by Charles Oldfather.

The intense feeling and weighty pro and con arguments aroused by the discussion of the problem in the editorial columns of the NEBRASKAN suggested it last week as a good roundtable topic.

The six man panel, led by Dr. Gray, will open up the guns on both sides, bringing forth the matter. (See PANEL, page 6.)

Ag students to hold spring party Saturday

Henry Mattison to play for affair; to present Goddess of Agriculture

The ag spring party, traditional social event on ag campus will be held in the college activities building Saturday night.

It is during this evening of fun and festivities that the 1941 Goddess of Agriculture and her six attendants will be presented. On May 3 she will reign over Farmers' Fair and all its activities.

The Goddess has been elected by Home Ec girls from a list of the eligible senior girls in ag college. Until she is presented at the spring party—in a very new and different manner—the identity of the 1941 Goddess will remain a secret. Last year's Goddess was Gwendolyn Jack of Tekamah.

Henry Mattison and his orchestra, featured at several university parties this year, will play for the dance. The theme of the party is the portrayal of a grape arbor.

For the first time in the history of the annual party the fellows won't have to worry about what to do or where to go in order to find refreshments during intermission. The ag college cafeteria in the home economics building less than one short block from the activities building will be open at least an hour and a half at intermission time during the party Saturday night, March 22.

According to Mrs. Rippeteau, cafeteria director, soft drinks, ice cream, candy, and sodas will be available when the cafeteria opens. Checking and re-checking arrangements will be made with the check stand and the cafeteria to avoid confusion with coats and wraps.

Preview from Stephens . . .

—Lincoln Journal.
These three pert Stephens women will be among the group which will visit the campus Tuesday. Approximately 650 will be entertained at a dance in the Union. Left to right they are Elizabeth McGeorge, Hailie Ladd, and Jackie Hamilton.

The DAILY'S former sports editor will escort Miss Hamilton to the affair on Tuesday.

Colonel requests all cadet officers to escort 'Susies'

Members of the Nebraska ROTC units, 'tenshun! The military department has announced that all cadet officers are asked to act as escorts for the girls from Stephens college Tuesday.

Major R. H. Offley, in his request, stated that "it is felt that this is a very fine opportunity for the Corps of Cadets to demonstrate their ability to entertain."

All those desiring to act as escorts must submit their names to the military department not later than 11 a. m. Monday. The students should also give their approximate height.

All cadets attending this function, to be held in the Union between 3:30 and 5:30 Tuesday, should be in uniform. Cadets attending will be excused from military science after 3 p. m.
